New-York Daily Times.

VOL. IV....NO. 988. NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1854. PRICE TWO CENTS.

THE ELECTION.

LATEST RETURNS.

VOTE FOR GOVERNOR BY MAJORITIES.

Clark over Seymour.		Seymour over Clark.
*Allegany	779	New-York	14581
*Broome	1724	*Albany	1445
Cattaraugus	811	*Chemung	405
*Cayuga	1505	*Delaware	56
*Chautauque	1368	*Erie	3133
*Chenango	1692	*Greene	323
*Columbia	64	*Herkimer	540
*Cortland	774	Kings	3319
*Clinton	414	*Lewis	34
*Duchess	258	*Oneida	349
*Essex	1020	*Orange	2023
*Franklin	76	*Putnam	63
*Fulton and Ham.	296	*Queens	301
*Genesee	875	*Rensselaer	63
*Jefferson	293	*Richmond	190
*Livingston	835	*Seneca	53
*Montgomery	203	*Suffolk	121
*Madison	906	*Steuben	400
*Monroe	715	*Tioga	5
*Niagara	1328	*Westchester	328
*Onondaga	183
*Ontario	1140	Total	27,941
*Orange	586
*Oswego	1407
*Orleans	907
*Rockland	4
*St. Lawrence	1335
*Saratoga	932
*Schenectady	409
*Schoharie	120
*Sullivan	33
*Schuyler	215
*Tompkins	865
*Ulster	66
*Washington	1928
*Warren	260
*Wayne	963
*Wyoming	856
*Yates	590
Total	28,117	Clark ahead	175

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR—Official Vote.

	Hurlbut.	Ludlow.
New-York	12804	20277
Suffolk	1143	1536
Westchester	2253	1758
Richmond	606	701
Putnam and Hamilton	1061	1509
Schenectady	1200	906
Niagara	2329	892
Seneca	1162	1091
Greene	1308	1659
Cayuga	2019	1976
Ontario	1527	400
Queens	1407	663
Rockland	381	494
Wyoming	2206	1094
Chenango	1658	1394
Cortland	2369	1277
Sullivan	7057	738
Genesee	1664	943
Broome	2314	364
Livingston	2110	926
Monroe	2719	2000
Montgomery	2028	1794
Herkimer	2400	2077
Chautauque	2329	1231
Chemung	1067	1432
Essex	2110	682
Jefferson	2670	2478
Oneida	7084	6476
Oswego	2468	938
Schoharie	2125	822
Tioga	1769	1404
Washington	2063	1150
Yates	1725	936
Thirty-two counties	82,571	64,309
Raymond ahead in thirty two counties		18,262
Seymour, for Governor, in same counties		41

OFFICIAL RETURNS—BY TELEGRAPH.

ALBANY, Thursday, Nov. 16.

ALLEGANY COUNTY.—We have the vote in all the towns in Allegany County, but Bolivar, Grove, Independence, Scio and Wirt. They foot up as follows: Clark, 1,862; Seymour, 1,167.

The Argus Whig, received this morning, give the following figures for that County: Clark, 2,102; Seymour, 1,150; Ulmann, 2,049; Brunson, 178.

In another part of the paper it says Clark's majority over Seymour is eight or nine hundred.

LEWIS COUNTY—Clark, 1,540; Seymour, 1,362.

WAYNE COUNTY—Clark, 2,007; Seymour, 2,064.

DELAWARE COUNTY—Clark, 3,772; Seymour, 3,898.

Schoharie County is reported as giving 215 majority for Clark. This County was counted last Winter, and has been overlooked till now.

Many of the official returns received have been officially corrected, the mistakes originating in the various County Canvassing offices.

The latest footings of the Journal make Seymour thirty-six ahead of Clark, with the official returns from the Counties of Allegany and Warren yet to come in.

The figures in the Argus office this evening, received complete, give a majority of five hundred and seventy-nine for Clark.

TROY, Thursday, Nov. 16.

CLINTON COUNTY—(Official.)—Majority for Clark over Seymour, 417.

ESSEX COUNTY—(Official.)—Clark's majority, 1,021.

NEW-YORK CITY.

THE PUMP.

Another Match with William Tell.

Another trotting match was made yesterday with a Jersey stallion and the celebrated horse William Tell, which is owned in part by the experienced turfman, JAMES WHELPLEY. The contest will come off at the Union Course, Long Island, on the 30th inst.

Sale of Paintings—National Academy of Design.

A large sale of Oil Paintings was commenced last evening at the Exhibition Rooms of the Academy of Design, No 633 Broadway. The collection is a private gallery, and embraces a fine array of well executed landscapes, some beautiful marine pieces, with pastoral subjects, &c., painted by foreign and home artists of celebrity. The sale gathered a meagre number. Purchasers were slow in their bids, and most of the sales effected were at prices greatly reduced from the original cost. A landscape with figures and stream, water breaking over rocks, a highly effective and powerfully painted picture, by ANDREWS, commanded the highest price, $75. By far the greatest number were sold for less than $20. To those appreciative of this department of art, and desirous of adding to their galleries, we should say, as paintings are now selling both at this and other similar auctions in town, that the present afforded the best possible facilities. At the above place the sale is to be resumed this evening.

Arrest of a Pottery-Dealer.

Yesterday morning, JOHN STORER, the keeper of a policy-office at No. 20 Second-avenue, was charged, before Judge WELSH, on the oath of ANNA LEONARD, of No. 352 Third-avenue, with selling her their worthless bits of paper for two cents each, purporting to be tickets for the Baltimore and Wilmington Lotteries. He told the woman "to come back at 9 o'clock, and then the drawings would be in by telegraph." She went accordingly, but "her numbers had drawn nothing." She purchased other numbers at the previous price, and was told to come at 7 o'clock. She departed, that she "asked for 70 and 30," but was not so fortunate as to obtain her favorite numbers; and added, "the tickets are small pieces of white paper," and remarked, "I have received no consideration for my money except the said little bits of white paper." The defendant was committed to await an examination in the matter.

The Alleged $10,000 Fraud.

Yesterday afternoon the Messrs. Emerson appeared before Justice OGDEN, of the Halls of Justice, accompanied by their counsel, and demanded a hearing in the case of the alleged fraud with which Mr. CHAPMAN recently charged them. JONAS B. PHILLIPS appeared for the prosecution, and owing to the absence of associate counsel a postponement of the investigation was requested. The magistrate granted the request and adjourned the examination over until the 27th inst. A card from the parties appears in our advertising columns. It is explanatory.

The "New-a-Day Guard."

A Target Company, bearing the above unique and expressive cognomen, will leave this City, accompanied by Dodworth's Band, on Thanksgiving Day, (30th inst.,) for Port Chester, where they will spend the day. The Company will be commanded by Capt. GEORGE B. WINANS, and is composed of the elite of the young men of this and the neighboring cities. The uniform adopted for the occasion is neat and appropriate.

Fire in Pearl-street.

The alarm of fire for the Seventh District at a quarter of 10 o'clock, last night, was caused by a slight fire in the pump-shop of GEORGE SELLEY, rear of No. 542 Pearl-street. It was extinguished without the aid of the Fire Department, and before any damage of consequence was done.

THE SECOND ANNUAL FOWL SHOW.—A meeting of the National Poultry Society was held in the Astor House last evening, P. T. BARNUM in the Chair, and it was resolved that the second annual show of the Society be held in the American Museum, New-York City, from the 16th to the 21st of January next, both inclusive. The Society, encouraged by the success of the last exhibition, will offer still more and larger premiums than were awarded last year, and promises to spare no exertions to render the Second Annual Show superior to the first. It was also

Resolved, That the Society feel called upon to express their great obligations to the several Railroads which transported the birds free of charge to the last exhibition; and in view of the fact that this show is made solely for the object of promoting improvement in the breed of domestic poultry, we hope the railroads and other public conveyances will extend the same favor to exhibitors the present season.

Mr. BARNUM will assume the management and responsibility of the Show on the same liberal terms and conditions that characterized the last.

After appointing Committees of Arrangement and transacting other preliminary business, the meeting adjourned sine die.

Accidents.

Yesterday evening a stage driver of the Knickerbocker line was terribly injured by falling from his vehicle box near Fourth-street. He was taken home insensible....Wednesday afternoon, about 2 o'clock, as Thomas Sweeney, a carman, was driving through Forty-fifth-street, he accidentally fell off his cart, the wheels passing over his body and breaking one of his legs. He was removed to the City Hospital, where his recovery is considered doubtful.

LONG ISLAND.

Kings County Board of Canvassers.

THIRD DAY.

The Board reassembled in the Brooklyn City Hall yesterday afternoon, according to adjournment.

TURIS G. BERGEN occupied the Chair, and a quorum answered to their names.

The imperfect returns were brought back and rectified, with the exception of the First District, Fifth Ward, when the Board proceeded with the business before them, commencing at the Tenth Ward, where the canvass was discontinued the evening previous.

On reaching the First and Second Districts of the Twelfth Ward, the returns were found to be imperfect, and Alderman REMSEN was deputed to take them to the Inspectors for correction.

A deficiency was also found in the First District of the Fifteenth Ward, and Supervisor RALEH was deputed to take the returns back for correction.

After canvassing from the Tenth to the Nineteenth Ward, exclusive of the imperfect districts, the Board adjourned till to-day, at 1 o'clock P. M.

Alderman DAYTON presented a communication from THOMAS BOWIE, one of the Inspectors of Election of the Second District, Sixth Ward, in which he protests against the reception of the returns of that District, and states, under oath, that said returns are illegal, for the reason that the public was, in part, excluded from the room in which the votes were counted, and also because the clerks were allowed to take the tally paper into an adjoining apartment to make up the canvass. He further states that he was induced to sign said returns at the time, and from matters which have since come to his knowledge connected therewith, he asks to have his name stricken out.

Supervisor ANDREWS moved to place the affidavit in the hands of the Grand Jury, for the purpose of having the party making it indicted for signing a statement which he now alleges to be false. Lost.

Alderman DAYTON moved to attach the paper to the returns which had been signed by the party—the returns having previously been passed upon by the Board of Canvassers.

Pending the discussion, the Board adjourned till to-day, at 1 P. M.

The Riot Investigation.

The investigation before Coroner HAWKEN in reference to the recent election riot, in which HARRISON and SMITH lost their lives, has been progressing for nine days, and would have been concluded last night but for the neglect of Sheriff LOTT to appear and give his testimony. A further adjournment took place until this (Friday) afternoon, and the Coroner issued an attachment, which was placed in the hands of Constable MINER, to compel the attendance of the Sheriff.

EDWARD WADE, one of the Deputy Sheriffs, is said to be dangerously ill from injuries received at the recent election riot.

Arrest of Illegal Voters.

Last evening two men, named ADAM PETER and JOHN GREEN, residing in the Third Ward, were arrested by Officer SMITH, of the Third Ward, Brooklyn, on a charge of voting illegally at the last election. They were taken to Brooklyn for trial.

A Lamentable Case of Suicide.

A young and beautiful woman, named ANN CONLAN, having been crossed in love, on Wednesday night took an over-dose of laudanum, and avowed her determination not to live longer. Dr. McDONNELL was sent for, but the girl positively refused to take anything to throw off the poison. At last accounts, Miss CONLAN was not dead, but there were no hopes of her recovery. She resides in Warren-street, near Nevins, Brooklyn.

THE FRANKLIN RELICS.—We have carefully examined the articles brought home by Dr. RAE, which are at the Admiralty. They consist of about two dozen large silver spoons and forks, a gold chronometer—the cases of which are detached from the works—portions of a telescope, four knives, a Guelphic order belonging to Sir JOHN FRANKLIN, a small circular silver plate bearing that officer's name, which probably served as the head of a walking-stick; one small gold watch-chain, and a fragment of a flannel vest, with Le Vescomte's initials in the centre. These articles constitute evidence of a positive kind so far as they go. Their presence in England is a fact—but which must be accounted for somehow. They were in the possession of Dr. RAE's Esquimaux; so far is certain. That they were not given to these natives by their owners we may assume; and the circumstance that they were found in their hands by Dr. RAE, denotes that they were picked up where their owners were either absent or dead.—Sunday Atlas.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE ASIA.

TERRIBLE FIGHTING AT SEBASTOPOL.

REPORTED RESULTS.

More About Mr. Soule and France.

RUSSIA RESOLVES ON A PROLONGED WAR.

AUSTRIA DELAYS TAKING PART.

The Markets, &c.

The British Mail steamer Asia, from Liverpool Saturday morning, Nov. 4, arrived at an early hour yesterday morning.

By the Asia we have three days' later news. Sharp fighting had been going on before Sebastopol, but the news to hand leaves us altogether in the dark as to particulars. Russian dispatches state that the Allies had suffered two several defeats, the French had had their works stormed and sixteen guns spiked; and the English cavalry had been attacked at Balaklava and routed with the loss of 500 horses. British and French statements offer no explicit denial of these reports. They merely say that the Russian story is "improbable" and "exaggerated." Complaints are made that the Allied Governments do not publish reliable information, and very unfavorable inferences are drawn from their silence. It is vaguely said, however, that Sebastopol cannot hold out many days."

At Liverpool the Cotton market was steady and slightly higher. Breadstuffs lower on the week, but buoyant in tone. Money easier. Consols 94.

The Canadian screw-steamships Cleopatra and Ottawa are embarking troops, the former at Cork, the latter at Portsmouth.

The Peninsular and Oriental Steam-Navigation Company have issued a special circular, ordering that (taking warning by the recent deplorable loss of the Arctic,) when the weather gets in thick, so that objects cannot be distinguished, say a quarter of a mile distant, the ships of the Peninsular and Oriental Company shall be slowed to half speed; or, if the fog become more dense, the speed is to be further reduced, or wholly stopped; and the steam-whistle to be sounded during the continuance of the fog. The diminution of speed and the sounding of the whistle are to be entered in the log-book. Any deviation from these orders will be punished by dismissal of the officers of the ships.

WAR MATTERS.

Movements and Opinions in Paris.

FROM OUR REGULAR CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Thursday, Nov. 2, 1854.

The Parisians are quite exasperated at getting MENSCHIKOFF's news three and four days before they get CANROBERT's. Half of their exasperation is because they believe it true, in spite of the editorial doubts thrown upon it. They would prefer making their news for themselves. There is quite a clamor for French news, but we receive none but Russian that is fresh. Everything else is old and repetitious. It is really aggravating to get nothing but MENSCHIKOFF's inevitable bulletin, stating that no damage has been done, and suggesting the idea that the enemy has gone huckleberrying. Every successive one elicits a shriek of disapprobation from the press. The Presse says MENSCHIKOFF must be blasé and incapable of emotion, if he attaches no importance to a bombardment of six days' duration. The Siècle is wild with vexation, and deliberately disbelieves. The story of spiking mortars and cannon elicited a whirlwind of incredulity. GALIGNANI, who writes editorials of late, thinks the sinking of Russian ships in the port of Sebastopol, to keep the enemy out, an unprincipled act; he thinks it would have simplified matters to let the enemy in. GALIGNANI must have forgotten the fact that MENSCHIKOFF is a Russian, and that his tactics are rather discordant than coincident with the plans of the Allies. If the Czar had made GALIGNANI commander of Sebastopol, I think the city would have fallen many weeks ago, and that numerous useful lives might have been spared. Then we have indications that Winter is setting in in the Black Sea, and it might just happen that snow at Sebastopol repeat in '54 the effects of snow at Moscow in '14. The Emperor is obliged to defer and defer his stag hunt at Compiegne, which it would be indecent to attend in his present state of uncertainty. No doubt his Majesty's temper is sorely tried, for it is six weeks since Sebastopol ought to have fallen, according to his own calculation in the Moniteur, and in fact his own declaration, on horseback, at Boulogne. No one sees him by any chance now in public. But the day when the grand news really arrives he will come to Paris in a great state of glee to receive the congratulations of his subjects, and pretend that he was sure of it, and had the usual confidence in his star.

A very good joke circulated at the Bourse the other day,—on an occasion when the gentlemen of the locality had time to amuse themselves. It was said, referring to his Majesty's Sebastopol announcement at Boulogne, that when the fortress really was taken LOUIS NAPOLEON might exclaim, "There, I said so! Why, I said so publicly a month ago!"

What recompense think you his Majesty has bestowed upon his cousin NAPOLEON JEROME, "for his fine conduct at the battle of the Alma?" He has authorized him to wear the military medal! This medal was invented two years ago, and paid for out of the Orleans Confiscation fund. He gives it by handsful, on gala days and at reviews, to meritorious soldiers of all grades. That he should bestow such a testimonial, fit only for a private, upon a man holding the rank of General of Division, seems really to be an intestinal insult. If it means anything, it means that the Emperor thinks it a praiseworthy act, that a General should maintain his self-possession in the presence of the enemy. It is another of the sugar plum recompenses that have been so often bestowed of late. I doubt whether the recipient will be grateful for the favor, evidently more likely to reduce him to the level of those to whom a medal would be a distinction, than to elevate him to the rank of those to whom a medal would be a mockery.

His Majesty has had to explain a passage in his letter of condolence to Madame ST. ARNAUD. A very plain-spoken letter published in the London Times, complained that the words "resisting timid opinions," applied to ST. ARNAUD, could only mean that ST. ARNAUD urged on the expedition to the Crimea, while the "timid" English dissuaded from it. The Moniteur was therefore obliged to protest against such "false interpretations," and to declare that the "timid opinions" were entertained by Frenchmen alone. The expression was used to contrast more forcibly the energy of ST. ARNAUD with the hesitation of some of his brother officers. Thus an anonymous Englishman, scribling in the London Times, has forced LOUIS NAPOLEON to explain, and perhaps to fib, for it was thought at the time he really intended a lunge at his allies. DICK TURPIN.

THE SOULE AFFAIR.

Present Aspect of the Case in France.

No Answer to the Demand for Explanation.

Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Daily Times.

PARIS, Thursday, Nov. 2, 1854.

DROUYN DE L'HUYS would appear to be bothered by the request to explain served upon him by Mr. MASON, in regard to Mr. SOULE. For up to a late hour to-day, he had returned no reply. He has asked for the opinion of two Cabinet councils, the Emperor's opinion, and the opinion of the Court of St. James. A conference has been held at St. Cloud, and another at Paris. Everybody must be perplexed, for no reply is forthcoming, and this evening and this morning made the fifth day. The London Times has proffered its advice—which is that France make no explanations. This article is translated at length in the Moniteur of this morning. The Examiner thinks that explanations must be made, on the contrary—but the Moniteur does not mention this singular opinion. So that our Legation is getting impatient and uneasy, and is more than ever decided to leave, unless an apology arrive speedily. You can judge as well as we can, whether LOUIS NAPOLEON is likely to apologize, or in any way to take a back track or a side track. Especially when I mention the fact that he has written an editorial on the subject, in the most alarmingly semi-official style, so bland, so dignified, so imperturbable, that every one who has become inured to his system feels convinced that treachery is lurking underneath, and suspects either snakes or snags. The imperial scrivener commences by saying that there are many reasons why France and the United States ought to be thick. I know you will laugh when I mention these reasons—but my duty is plain, and to shrink would be poltroonery. He says that "the name of the Sovereign who now governs France ought to awaken reminiscences of ancient ties; the former Empire, with its peculiar amplitude," was an ally of America. Then the present Emperor has revived the "principle of appeal to the nation and of universal suffrage, which must knit the two countries closer together." I feel that you are laughing, but I continue undauntedly. "The principles which the government of the Emperor defends are such as speak to the mind of a free nation, and must excite its sympathy." After all these motives for mutual esteem, come the regrets, mingled with surprise that other events present a different character. These events are the SOULE duel, the DILLON affair at San Francisco, and the refugee demonstration in New-York Harbor. The imperial editor would be loath to suppose that the Government is in any way responsible for these deplorable proceedings, and trusts that the friendship of the two nations will soon have lasted a century.

But the cloven foot is plainly visible in this bland extract. The evident meaning is that France ardently desires peace with America; but that it is possible the conduct of America may compel her to stand up for her rights, her honor and her flag. It means to prepare the public mind, to serve as a hint to other editors how to treat the delicate subject, how to make it appear that France is reluctantly forced to notice these things, and would grieve to differ on any point with her beloved transatlantic ally. The article would be unnecessary were a polite reply to be returned to Mr. MASON, and is the most conclusive evidence I have seen that the reply will be a tart one. But you will publish the entire article from the Constitutionnel, and may rest assured it was either written by the Emperor personally, or by DROUYN DE L'HUYS, upon data furnished by him.

Americans in Paris are very much divided in opinion upon the merits of this affair. It is maintained, largely, on one side, that Mr. SOULE's character and quality as Ambassador protected him in Spain only, to whose Court he was accredited, and that consequently France had a right to disregard his position in its dislike for his person. On the other hand, it is held that an Ambassador is sacred from insult throughout Christendom, not only in the countries near to whose sovereigns he is to reside, but in those which he may have occasion to cross, or which he may choose to visit. This would seem, if it is indeed not yet settled, and which the present occurrence may serve to simplify. I may say, however, that all are agreed upon the opportuneness, the wisdom, the necessity of the measure. All regard it as at once inopportune, unwise and unnecessary. So do such French as are acquainted with the facts; so do all Englishmen whom I have heard express an opinion. It would do no good to vex the United States, and it might do harm. That the Government must abominate Mr. SOULE, his antecedents, his principles, his acts and his associations, required no such evidence. The Government had no reason to fear Mr. SOULE's influence or his presence, against which its police was a doubly sufficient safeguard. To everybody's eyes, therefore, the measure of exclusion has an appearance of gratuitous and uncalled for rebuke. That General PRINCE deserved it, can admit of no doubt, but it may be a question whether it was prudent to administer it. The London Times calls it a "foolish affair" all round; intimating that LOUIS NAPOLEON was foolish in repulsing SOULE, and that Mr. MASON is foolish in calling for immediate explanation. The opinion is gaining ground that the American people will not consider itself insulted in the person of Mr. SOULE, and will not make war for an indignity put upon a foreigner, a slaveholder and a demagogue—a man whose nomination is deplored, and whose eagerness for mischief it acknowledged. Reflecting people rather look upon it as an incident which may be productive of lasting good, in the reform it may induce in the manner of making foreign appointments. It is is regarded as a French quarrel, between a French demagogue and a French demagogue hater—if it is thought that the Government would not have taken the same step against an American born, and that our own authorities are deeply to blame for putting a dangerous man in a responsible position, perhaps it will be thought the part of wisdom to profit by the lesson, and resolve to err in a like manner no more.

A curious feature of the affair was, that for a week no one knew it. Not a Paris correspondent alluded to it in the London journals. The Times stated it, however, as a fact, and it was from thence copied, with doubts, into the Presse here. The Presse received instructions to pursue the subject no further. All the other papers were forbidden to mention it. The Bourse had it one day, distantly, but forgot it the next. Thus an event that might involve two countries in war, and which had led a Minister Plenipotentiary to assert that he should demand his passports, was totally kept from the knowledge of the people. Either this Government assumes undue privileges for itself, or it is entertaining extraordinary ideas of the fitness of the nation to be acquainted with a misunderstanding which may end in a rupture or hostilities. Now, however, the subject has fallen into the public domain, the Moniteur giving the cue and the Constitutionnel setting the psalm.

Apropos of the Moniteur, it is publishing, in its feuilleton, without acknowledgment, a translation of The Lamplighter, under the title of Gerty. So that the great authority in the matter of signatures disdains to obey its own regulations, and actually prints an American novel in such a way as to make it pass for an original French production.

SANDERS' letter to the French people is not circulated with much energy. While bales of the Swiss letter were sent in supposed patriots in Paris for distribution, nobody has seen or been able to procure a copy of this later production. I do not speak of myself, for of course I know all about it, as a respectable correspondent should. I noticed that it abounded in capital letters and notes of admiration, and that it appeared to have emanated from a brain whose hair stood on end. I have no sympathy with Mr. SANDERS, nor in fact with any of his class—all of them intent on furthering private ends by the pretence and assumption of holy and lofty aspirations. All of SANDERS' Swiss and Gallic eloquence has no other end and aim than to serve as a fulcrum in the next Presidential election. Is it possible that any one takes SANDERS for a benefactor? Two years from now, it will be claimed, in the interest of his party, that he struggled for the liberty of Europe, and the redemption from bondage of millions of oppressed men, women and children. No one will believe it then,—why should they now? DICK TURPIN.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

LIVERPOOL, Saturday Morning, Nov. 4.

BARING BROTHERS quote Cotton 9¼@9¾d. Bullion in Bank of England shows a decrease of £165,000. Silver Dollars are quoted at 4s. 6d. Bar Silver, 4s. 6½d. Doubloons, 74s. Eagles, 76s. 3d.

It is said that Mr. OLIVER's fleet of ships will be offered for sale on the 23d inst., credit being permitted to purchase to extent of one-half, with Mr. OLIVER's own paper. There are rumors of two or three small firms being in embarrassment—but only to trifling amount.

The steamer Cherig, from Quebec, arrived this morning.

The mail to hand this morning brings no accounts really later or more intelligible from the Crimea. We have a repetition, in vague shapes, of the previous news, and a statement that to the 27th of October, the siege was progressing favorably. The city was on fire in several places on the 18th and 19th.

There are rumors of disturbances in Sicily and Calabria.

Official.

SATURDAY, 12:45 A. M.—The following telegraphic dispatch has been received at the Foreign Office from Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE, and forwarded to the Duke of NEWCASTLE, Minister of the War Department:

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 26.—The capture of the English steam-transport, which left Balaklava on the evening of the 25th, confirms in a great measure the information brought this morning by the Greek and transmitted immediately to London and Paris, and transmitted immediately to London and Paris, and to the vicinity of Balaklava on the 25th, and to the vicinity of Balaklava on the 25th, and 12th.

There are rumors of disturbances in Sicily and Calabria.

Official.

SATURDAY, 12:45 A. M.—The following telegraphic dispatch has been received at the Foreign Office from Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE, and forwarded to the Duke of NEWCASTLE, Minister of the War Department:

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 26.—The capture of the English steam-transport, which left Balaklava on the evening of the 25th, confirms in a great measure the information brought this morning by the Greek, and transmitted immediately to London and Paris

[illegible] with. The result was unexpected. The [illegible] the infantry. On another there [illegible] were Highlanders and Scotch troops. The Turks gave way, and even behind the guns, which, taken by the Russians, were retaken from them. The Russian, on the contrary, remained firm in their position. Other forces arrived, and the Russians were obliged to yield the ground, retreating [illegible] of two forts, from which they fired upon our troops. Three regiments of English Light Cavalry, exposed to the cross fire of the Russian batteries, suffered immensely. The French took part in the affair with admirable bravery. On the next day their position was attacked by a body of 3,000 Russians, as well from the side of the town as from that of Balaklava. They repulsed the enemy with great slaughter.

The loss of the Russians must have been very great. It is affirmed that the fire of the batteries of the town had much slackened, and according to the report of wounded officers some of whom have arrived at Buyukdere. The belief continued that Sebastopol would be soon in the hands of the allies. This is merely what has been bandied on the spot, from several persons who were eyewitnesses of what took place.

The names of the killed and wounded are reserved for the official occasion; among the names there is none of a general officer.

(Signed) STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE.

Lord DUNKELLIN's promotion as Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel in the Coldstream Guards, appears in the Gazette last evening.

THE WAR.

Severe Fighting—Result Doubtful.

The British steamer Trent left the coast of the Crimea on the 25th October, and arrived on the following day at Varna, whence a dispatch, sent for transmission by telegraph to the nearest station, reached the French and English Governments, on November 1. Up to the time of the Trent's departure the siege and bombardment were going on with regularity and success. So heavy had been the fire of the besieging batteries, and so terrible was the loss of life in the town of Sebastopol, that the air was reported to be tainted by the number of unburied dead. Guns had been brought to bear upon the gates, and Admiral NACHIMOFF had been killed by the fragment of a shell. If this last circumstance be confirmed, it is remarkable that the two chief officers of the Russian navy who planned and executed the attack on Sinope, should have both been killed within a year. A report was circulated in Constantinople that Lord RAGLAN had expressed his opinion in favor of a prolonged bombardment in preference to an immediate assault. Having accomplished the prodigious labor of conveying the heavy guns and ammunition, and opening a successful fire on Sebastopol, the reduction of the place is considered only a question of time, and the operations are carried on with comparatively small loss to the allied forces. An assault, on the contrary, though it might lead to more rapid success, would cost innumerable lives and materially weaken the besieging armies.

The Russian Statement and Greek Confirmation Thereof.

The Wiener Zeitung publishes the following dispatch, which it professes to have received from Kishenoff, in Bessarabia, under 29th October:

"On the 25th, General LIPRANDI attacked the detached camp of the English and took the four redoubts which protected their position. The assailants also took eleven guns.

"At the same time such a powerful cavalry attack was made that it probably cost the English half their light cavalry. Lord CARDIGAN, who was wounded, escaped with difficulty.

"Lord DUNKELLIN was taken prisoner."

Greek Accounts.

Communications from Odessa to the Greek [illegible] to assert that the English had really met with the severe losses reported in the Russian bulletins. They say that on the 25th October, Gen. LIPRANDI attacked the Allied camp at Balaklava, stormed four redoubts, and took eleven guns. The English cavalry were totally beaten and lost 500 men. It is certain that the Russians have received considerable reinforcements, although not perhaps as many as the number reported—30,000 men. A still stronger corps was expected from Perekop. In the recent attack upon the forts at the mouth of Sebastopol before, the vessels of the Allies were very much damaged.

The London Times' Statement.

The Times says: "We have received through our correspondent at Vienna, a dispatch which was specially forwarded from Constantinople to Semlin, and thence by telegraph. News has been received from Sebastopol of the 23d, that the bombardment had continued incessantly for seven days. The fire of the Russians was said to be slackening, but the French works were not strong enough, and had been much injured. The British were said to be within three hundred yards of the Russian works. A deserter has stated that the Russian loss is very great. NACHIMOFF is killed. A fire broke out in the town on the morning of the 25th, and was burning when the steamer left."

A second dispatch from the same correspondent says, of date evening of Nov. 2.

"Official dispatches, dated Oct. 25, for the English, French and Austrian Governments, received here (Vienna) show that the siege of Sebastopol is progressing favorably. They mention frequent reconnoitres, but say nothing of LIPRANDI's alleged victory. The French division from the Danube had passed the Bosphorus, as a reinforcement to the besieging army."

The Times adds that the above intelligence may be fully relied upon. The affair took place near Eupatoria, where the Allies were on the look-out for the advancing reinforcements of the Russians. The British cavalry were attacked, but the French advanced to their assistance, and the Russians retired. The date is not exactly known, but is supposed to have been the 22d of October.

Another account states that two Russian men-of-war that had been "cannonaded over" in the harbor to serve as batteries, had been sunk by the fire of the Allies. The English had brought some long guns to bear on the forts.

Lord DUNKELLIN's family has been informed by the English Government that his reported capture is not true,—or, at least, doubtful.

From an editorial in the Paris Pays we gather, that the French, after some fighting, had taken possession of the Cemetery, which commands on the south the Quarantine Bay. This would bring the French approaches quite close to the barracks of Sebastopol. Perhaps it may prove to be this position that the Russians have retaken.

The recent attack by sea was stated to be directed against "the Quarantine harbor," but we have no information that the fort which is on the east of the Bay, that is, between the Quarantine harbor and the town, has been destroyed.

It is foreseen that one or more pitched battles must be fought in the Crimea, and therefore the allied commanders have determined to reduce Sebastopol, if possible, by bombardment, and thus preserve the lives of their troops.

Captain DE VAL DE DAMPIERRE, aide-de-camp of General BOSQUET, was taken prisoner by the Russians. He begged the Russian General to send intelligence to the French camp that he was a prisoner, and not killed. The Russian told him to go himself, when he did,—and, of course, returned and surrendered.

Water begins to fail in Sebastopol. Every morning, women and children come outside to the works, and are permitted to return without molestation.

Lord RAGLAN's chief interpreter, a Greek, has been sent to Constantinople for trial as a Russian spy.

Menschikoff's Official Report.

The Journal of St. Petersburg publishes an official account of the events which have recently taken place in the Crimea. Prince MENSCHIKOFF reports the Russian loss in killed and wounded in the hands of the Allies at 4,500. On the morning of the 17th ult., he states that the English had only two pieces which were capable of continuing the firing, and that the French had been much better off. A powder magazine had exploded in the French fleet, and another, No. 3 had 22 of its men killed. Admiral KORNILOFF is dead, and Admiral NAKIMOFF wounded.

The Baltic.

Breadstuff advices of Oct. 30, state that in consequence of the movement on the South, by SAPUN PACHA, Prince GORTSCHAKOFF has given orders to the Russian troops who had not yet passed the Dniester to make a retrograde movement, and to take up a position on the Prut and Dunube. ACHMET PACHA has received orders to join SADIK PACHA with 10,000 men, whilst IASKENDER BEY is to enter the Dobrudscha with 4,000 cavalry.

The truth of the matter seems to be, that GORTSCHAKOFF's movements in the Dobrudscha had reference merely to strengthening his position.

The Baltic.

A letter from the Baltic says that the Gulf of Finland only contains two strong places which would be of value to the allies, namely, Sweaborg, which would render them masters of Finland, and Cronstadt, which would open the way to St. Petersburg. Revel is a little or no use, as it is without any strategical line, and for several years past it has ceased to be a Russian naval station. The capture of Sweaborg, with the maritime force of the allies, and 30,000 to 40,000 of land force, might be considered as certain. The nature of the coast is such that a landing cannot be prevented, provided it be effected at five or six miles distant from Helsingfors, which can also be taken. It is very little fortified, and situated, as it is, at the distance of half of a mile from Sweaborg, completely commands the fortress. Once taken, Finland does not permit a hostile army to keep the field. The capture of the Aland Islands is stated to have been merely with the intention of occupying the attention of the Russians while preparations were being made for the attack on the Crimea. It was believed at St. Petersburg that Sweaborg and Cronstadt were to be attacked before the close of the campaign, while any attack on Sebastopol was regarded as impossible. It was that conviction which occasioned the counter orders for the dispatch of the troops that Prince MENSCHIKOFF demanded, so far back as June last.

Progress of Negotiations.

The most contradictory rumors are current as to the present state of negotiations. Two Austrian notes are yet (Oct. 29,) unanswered by Count NESSELRODE. A prevalent impression is, that a collective note will be forwarded to St. Petersburg by Austria, Prussia, and the German States. Austria will certainly not, unless compelled, come to an open rupture with Prussia, until she is confident of the support of Prussia and the Germanic Governments. Russia continues to use all means to prevent Prussia siding with Austria. Consequently the policy of Austria is to gain time, and she is therefore well disposed to enter upon the protracted negotiations which would arise from any mediation in which the Middle German States are parties.

There is a talk of a note from Count NESSELRODE to Prussia stating that Russia is prepared for all contingencies, and will, under all circumstances, maintain her traditional policy in the East. Even if Sebastopol should fall, and the Crimea be lost, Russia will not relinquish any right hitherto acquired by treaty. Russia, Count NESSELRODE says, is the mightiest power in the East, and in spite of any disaster which may befall her, she will continue to be so. Although Russia has not yet brought her principal military power into the field, the Western Powers have had no cause to triumph.

The Latest Accounts from the Crimea.

From the London Times, Nov. 2.

If the first tidings of the success of the allied armies in the Crimea were received throughout Europe with a degree of confidence and exultation which proved to be somewhat exaggerated and premature, we are bound to be upon our guard lest the first arrival of less favorable intelligence from Russian sources should produce a still more unfounded amount of despondency and alarm. The accounts received with apparent belief by some of our cotemporaries bore on the face of them an extreme improbability, and they have since been contradicted even by the last report from St. Petersburg. We are, however, fortunately in possession of much more positive intelligence, which puts an end to the apprehensions these unwarrantable reports were calculated to excite. The British steamer Trent left the coast of the Crimea on the 25th, and arrived on the following day at Varna, whence a dispatch, sent for transmission by telegraph to the nearest station, reached the French and English Governments yesterday. Up to the time of the departure of the Trent the siege and bombardment were going on with regularity and success. So heavy had been the fire of the besieging batteries, and so terrible was the loss of life in the town of Sebastopol, that the air was reported to be tainted by the dead who had fallen in defence of this devoted fortress. Guns had been brought to play upon some of the gates, and Admiral NACHIMOFF had been killed by the fragment of a shell. If this last circumstance be confirmed, it is remarkable that the two chief officers of the Russian navy who planned and executed the attack on Sinope should have expiated within one year that outrage, which gave so terrible an impulse to the ravages of this war.

We cannot tell what amount of confidence is to be given to the report circulated at Constantinople, that Lord RAGLAN had expressed his opinion at a council of war in favor of a prolonged bombardment in preference to an immediate assault, but there are many obvious reasons in favor of the former course. Having accomplished the prodigious labor of conveying the heavy guns and their ammunition to our batteries and opened a successful fire on Sebastopol, the reduction of the place is only a question of time, and these operations are carried on with very inconsiderable losses to the allied forces. An assault, on the contrary, though it might lead to more rapid success, would cost innumerable lives and materially weaken the besieging armies. Sebastopol is occupied and defended not merely by the ordinary garrison of a fortress, but by an army. These troops are placed at a very great disadvantage so long as they are exposed to the incessant fire of our batteries, for it is impossible that the casemates of the forts should be sufficiently extensive to afford them shelter; but in an assault their numbers and their desperation would render them formidable enemies. The continuance of the seige is so far advantageous to the allied armies that it must exhaust and destroy the resources of the Russians in the Crimea infinitely more than those of the French and English camps. But it must be borne in mind that the fall of Sebastopol does not necessarily terminate the contest in the Crimea, even at the present time; and that the army of the allies, which will soon, we trust, enter the place, has also to hold it against the possibility of an attack by the enemy, whose boasted reinforcements are said to be on the way, and who may therefore be able to undertake with fresh troops a Winter campaign. Such a contingency may not be very probable, but it is one against which the Commanders-in-Chief are bound to provide; and on this account, as well as on motives of humanity and prudence, they will doubtless husband as much as possible the strength of an army which has already been so much reduced by casualties and disease. Eventually, if the place does not capitulate, an assault will, of course, be made, but not until the batteries have been advanced to the nearest point which can be reached before the walls, and the force of our projectiles brought within the shortest possible range. Although, therefore, the interval which has elapsed since the receipt of dispatches is painfully long, and the delay has been aggravated by the non-arrival of the Cambria, French mail steamer, which was due at Marseilles on Friday last, the progress of the operations is not slower than might be anticipated in a siege of such magnitude. The trenches were opened on the 12th, the fire began at a very long range on the 17th, and the approaches have to be driven forward through difficult ground to fresh lodgments in each succeeding night, for the works are, of course, chiefly carried on by night, and the firing by day. Our latest accounts are of the 25th, barely eight days from the commencement of the attack—a period within which no regular seige operations could be completed, much less brought to a victorious termination. Meanwhile, the grand object of the destruction of Sebastopol and of the Russian army is steadily pursued, and at present we have no reason to believe that the advantages we have gained are counterbalanced by excessive sacrifices or by any reverse.

The Russian Account of Operations in the Crimea.

From the Journal of St. Petersburg.

The Anglo-French conducted their united forces before Sebastopol from the south of that town to the south, thus entirely changing the basis of operations. They attained this object by a flank march round the town. The cryphs of the foreign press cannot find expressions to praise sufficiently the skillfulness of this manoeuvre. Without wishing to detract from the merit of it, at least it is just to mention this and to explain the connexion of Prince MENSCHIKOFF in reference to the enemy.

After the battle upon the Alma, the Prince, not finding a position strong enough upon the Katcha and the Belbek to give a fresh battle to the enemy, passed the Tchernaya, and concentrated his forces in a position to the east of the town, after having garrisoned the forts of the North with a sufficient number of troops.

The enemy advanced, passed the Katcha and the Belbek, and reached the heights which surround the northern forts.

The position of Prince MENSCHIKOFF was disadvantageous, inasmuch as it enabled the enemy to occupy the direct communications with the interior of the empire. It was therefore necessary to abandon that position, and the Prince achieved the object by a luminous idea carried into effect in the most daring manner. He marched during the night of the 24th to the 25th of September towards Bakhtcheral, after having crossed the Tchernaya by a single bridge. He executed this march in flank in the course of the night, and in the morning of the 25th found himself in the valley of Bakchisarai, placed in the flank and the rear of the enemy, having his communication free with the interior of the empire, and with the reinforcements which he expected. The new position of the Prince would have been annoying to the enemy if the latter had been desirous of attempting an attack against the forts of the north. For this reason the enemy did not make the attempt to attack the forts of the north. On the contrary, he adopted the resolution of changing the point of attack from the north to the south of Sebastopol, by turning the town to the east. Let it be permitted to us here to throw a light upon some circumstances, which will enable an impartial judgment to be formed respecting the operations of the two parties.

Prince MENSCHIKOFF had to march across mountains and by one road, which from the point where Mackenzie's Farm is situate was only at a distance of four wersts from the advanced posts of the enemy. Indeed, the bivouack fires were seen thence. The Prince could not attempt to cover his march by means which are usually adopted in such cases, for it was necessary above all things, not to attract the attention of the enemy. In his position it was necessary to avoid a battle, which would have hindered the movements of his column. The Prince marched with his train and park of artillery. All these difficulties were surmounted, and our troops had, on the morning of the 25th, reached a point where the enemy did not suppose them to be.

Our adversaries also executed, and almost at the same time, a flank march, but under much more advantageous circumstances. From Belbek, and the plateau which they occupied on the 24th, they had only to gain Mackenzie's Farm in order to attain the route leading by a descent to the Tchernaya. The enemy executed this movement without being perceived by us, for this point where Mackenzie's Farm is situated is at a distance of 16 wersts from the spot where our forces were stationed; and, besides, it is also covered by woody mountains.

If Prince MENSCHIKOFF had been desirous of attacking the enemy during the march, he could only have done so by one route, which, for a distance of 10 wersts, is upon an ascent from the Belbek to Mackenzie's Farm. It would only have been necessary for the enemy to place a few batteries in a good position upon the heights to enable him to check our attack for so long a time that the movement of the column could not be completed without danger. The enemy had the great advantage of marching without guns and artillery, which, in the meantime, had been quietly transported by sea to Balaklava. Whoever has marched with a troop, whether an army or a battalion, will appreciate the difference between advancing with and without a train of artillery.

It was requisite that Prince MENSCHIKOFF should avoid a combat during his movement, because the enemy was placed in an advantageous position for it. Our adversaries, on the contrary, marched in such a manner that they would not have been inconvenienced by an attack upon their flank, an attack which the Prince, from the nature of the territory, could not bring about without engaging in it under unfavorable circumstances.

The Czar's Mission to the East.

The St. Petersburg Court Journal, of the 20th, publishes an article worthy of notice, as it contains a sort of programme of Russia's policy, and announces without circumlocution the objects which Russia seeks to attain by the present war. At first it states that the demands made by the Western Powers of the Porte, in regard to placing the rights of its subjects upon the same level, go twice as far as was intended to be demanded by Russia, especially through Prince MENSCHIKOFF's mission. If (says the Court Journal) it was the conviction of the Western Powers that it was essential to carry out their object, they should have said, on the Prince being sent to Constantinople, "You ask too little. You only demand the half in the entire equality." Had this been done, the unhappy conflict might have been avoided, and the "fatuitous publication of the blue book" rendered superfluous. The noble and decided language addressed by the Emperor in regard to Turkey does not reflect upon him (adds the Court Journal) the slightest spot as monarch, Christian, or ally, because the existence of the Ottoman rule is an anomaly—a thing deprived of vitality. England was in her heart convinced of the rights and justice of the Emperor, but concealed her own grasping intentions in order to convert them at the proper moment to her own special advantage. Did not England fear the power and unbending character of the Emperor, the world would never have witnessed a union between France and England. England looked about for an ally, which, after the object was attained, might be more easily thrown overboard than Russia. Russia's mission is certainly great. She is called upon to set limits to the materialism of England. France holds a secondary position. She is a mere bubbling political whirlpool—not a durable and generally destructive inundation. Russia must fight England, because she alone, and not France, is the focus and support of all revolutionary principles. It is not Russia, but England, who, imbued to the core with "mercantilism," treads under foot humanity and the rights of men. It is Russia's mission to protect Europe from the torrents of the West. As formerly, the stream flowed from East to West—now the reverse is the case. No matter how the causes for the war may be regarded, that between Russia and Turkey is founded on religious grounds. Through the policy of the Western Powers the war has, however, assumed the character of a struggle between Conservatism and Communist revolution. Only one path is open to the Emperor—that of right and honor. He will adhere to his word not to make conquests, but at the same time it is his mission to restore Russian "preponderance" on the Bosphorus, because that is absolutely requisite for the development of Russia, and the reestablishment of order. It is Russia's holy duty to establish and consolidate the dominion of Christianity on the Bosphorus. Finally, the Emperor, as the strong rock and defender of Europe, has to fulfill the lofty mission of consolidating European Conservatism. To attain this object, Russia must carry on an obstinate war, which will break down England's avarice, and unconditionally terminate Turkish miracle

THE CASE OF MR. SOULE.

Views of the French and English Press.

Correspondence of the London Times.

PARIS, Tuesday, Oct. 31.

The incident relative to M. SOULE does not appear to have excited much interest among the public generally. The American Minister in Paris had an interview with the Minister for Foreign Affairs on the subject. M. DROUYN DE LHUYS is said to have assured him that there were good reasons for the conduct of the French authorities, and that they should be forthcoming when necessary. In the meantime, he said that they might refer to his Government for instructions. Mr. MASON is also said to have had an audience with the Emperor the day following. What occurred is not known, but it does not appear to have been satisfactory to Mr. MASON. The question naturally occurs, what can be the real cause of the order to prevent M. SOULE entering the French territory? It cannot be that gentleman's conduct in Spain, with which this Government has nothing to do. It cannot be the cause which, now seven and twenty years ago, compelled M. SOULE to expatriate himself. The judicial sentence which condemned him for the libel in the Non Jeune to two or three years' imprisonment has long since ceased to have effect, and his contumacy has been punished by proscription. Moreover, if the Government had any claim over M. SOULE, it might have been enforced during his stay in France, previous to going to Madrid. The fact is, that information has been given to the authorities that during M. SOULE's stay in England, since the breaking up of the Ministerial Grammar at Oxford, he has been in frequent communication with certain of the refugees, whose revolutionary orders and proclamations he circulates. There can be little doubt that even among the plotters there are traitors, for the day after a plot is formed the Government is made acquainted with it. Such, at all events, is stated to be the motive for the order preventing him from passing through France. It is difficult to say in what light the American Government will view the act. Though Minister to Spain, M. SOULE has no diplomatic character here, and the French Government has the right to exclude from its territory any foreigner it may have cause to complain of.

France and the United States.

From the Constitutionnel.

There is no nation which seems better calculated than the United States for living in good intelligence with France. The friendly feeling, so natural between the two countries, showed itself from the very commencement of the American Union. It was then commanded by interests, as it is now commanded by interests and traditions; for the direction which the old French monarchy had given was followed by succeeding Governments, and if there was any name that could revive these reminiscences in America, it is assuredly that of the Sovereign who now governs France. The first Empire practiced towards the United States, with the amplitude of ideas which was peculiar to it, a policy which has been always considered at this side of the Atlantic as one of the essential points of our system of alliance. The principle of appealing to the nation, and of universal voting, which the new dynasty has taken for its starting point, could only have for consequence to draw closer together the two countries, in spite of the difference of form which exists between the two Governments. If the interests at present at stake in the world be examined closely, everything concurs to demonstrate how much that good understanding was indicated in advance. The principles which the Government of the Emperor defends are such as speak to the mind of a free nation and greatly excite its sympathy. It is for the political independence of Governments, it is for liberty of conscience menaced by an audacious aspiration after universal dominion, that France has taken up arms; and whilst she is defending on land ideas so much in harmony with those which constitute the basis of American civilization, she has taken care that the principles of maritime liberty, so dear to the great transatlantic nation, should be, from the very outset of hostilities, shielded from the vicissitudes to which neutrals were accustomed for a century. These considerations, of the very highest political and moral order, joined to the powerful material interests which unite the two countries, between which such important and extensive commercial transactions are daily going on, should, we repeat it, establish between them a sincere reciprocity of good relations. And, in consequence, it is with a regret mingled with surprise that we have seen a series of facts and incidents taking place which would seem to present another character. With the exception of Russia, the Government of the Emperor keeps up the best relations with all the Governments of the Old and New World. However, in a foreign Court, a difference takes place between a diplomatic agent and a representative of France; and that agent, not content with having originated that difference, altogether of a personal nature, seems to do all he can by his demeanor and his language to transform it into a political conflict. Who is that agent? An American Minister. In the New World, the privileges of our consular flag, although founded on a recent treaty, are disregarded. Which is the country where our international right has been thus infringed? A State of the American Union. Our navy is everywhere respected. There is, however, a roadstead in which a handful of anarchical refugees have seized on the occasion of the presence of our sailors to organize with impunity a demagogical masquerade; and that act is that of an American town. Facts of this nature, if multiplied, would accord but little with the traditions of friendship and the community of principles and interests which exists between the two nations, and which seem to force themselves as a duty on the two Governments. But it is evidently impossible to see in these incidents anything else than the work of some mischief-makers, whose acts are in disaccord with the intentions of the American Cabinet and nation. Whilst deploring them, we feel full confidence that they will remain in the state of purely individual acts, and we know in advance that the Union, always animated towards France with a sympathy which is reciprocal, and which will soon be of a century's duration on both sides, declines the responsibility of incidents with which it has remained altogether unconnected.

The Intentions of the French Government.

From the London Daily News.

We learn that it is the intention of the French Government publicly to disclaim any intention to evince disrespect for the United States by the recent refusal to allow Mr. Soulé to enter France. Our regret that such a step had been taken—and we did regret it—was inspired simply by a previous knowledge of the extreme sensitiveness of some Americans, and by the belief that the refusal was making Mr. SOULE of too much consequence. Mr. SOULE had no diplomatic or official character in France, and in Spain he had wantonly forced a quarrel upon the French Minister at the Court of Madrid. We most sincerely hope that these considerations will be well weighed by our kinsmen on the other side of the Atlantic. We also hope that the explanation of the French Government may be of a nature to allay any umbrage that may have been taken by the American people. We regard any war between the citizens of the United States and England as an unnatural struggle between blood relations. Scarcely less unnatural would be a war between the citizens of the United States and the French people, for the French people were the faithful and unswerving allies of the Americans in their great struggle for independence. At this moment, when the great cause of national independence has summoned France and England in alliance to the battle-field, it would be melancholy to see the only other nation in the world which stands on the same level with them at odds with both or either. We regret the handle that has been given to Mr. SOULE and his partizans; but if, as we are led to expect, the French Government offer a full and satisfactory explanation to the United States, we shall say of it, as we have said of the "timid counsels" affair—it was almost worth while to make the mistake in order to have an opportunity of making such frank and manly amends.

The French Government and the United States.

From the London Daily News.

PARIS, Thursday, Nov. 2.

A rumor of a most serious kind is in circulation to-day, but I only give it as a rumor. It is said that Mr. MASON, the United States Minister, applied to M. DROUYN DE LHUYS for explanation on the subject of a passport to travel through France having been refused to Mr. SOULE. M. DROUYN DE LHUYS replied that he had no explanation to give. It is further reported that Mr. MASON was heard to say in a drawing-room yesterday evening, that from the tenor of the dispatches he had received from his Government he expected within three weeks to receive an order to quit Paris. Whether there be any truth or not in the above story, it is certain—unfortunately certain—that the tone of the French semi-official press has been on several recent occasions extremely violent towards the United States. Only three days ago there was an article in the Patrie which actually read like one written to prepare the way for an open breach. I abstained from noticing the article at the time because I was unwilling (such a serious matter being in question) to attribute to it an importance which it possibly might not deserve. I was privately assured that the Patrie spoke without warrant, and that an article in the morning government journal might shortly be expected to appear treating of French relations with America in a tone of studied moderation. I am not in a position to say more at present.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Contributions for the Wounded—Lord Palmerston's Theology.

Contributions to a very large amount continue to flow into the various funds established for relief of the sick and wounded. Public meetings were being held in the chief cities in aid of the "patriotic fund."

An incident, somewhat singular, as showing the peril of departure, by even one hair-breadth, from the orthodox track, as settled by the Church, is to be found in the news to hand. No less a man than Lord PALMERSTON is the offender. His Lordship was presiding at a meeting of agricultural laborers, and addressed them as follows:

"You will find that all children are born good; it is bad education and bad associations in early life, that corrupt the minds of men. It is true that there are now and then exceptions to general principles. As there are men who have been born with club feet, born blind, or with other personal defects, so there will happen that children will be born with defective dispositions; but these are exceptions. On principle I contend that mind and heart of man are naturally good, and it depends upon training and education, whether that goodness implanted at birth shall continue to display itself, or whether, by bad associations, it shall be corrupted and destroyed."

Such doctrines, it appears, are not for the "common people." The London Times says: "This is a doctrine, at all events, wholly gratuitous." Another paper says that PALMERSTON's rustic auditors were "shocked at his Lordship's ignorance" and impiety.

An official report of the loss occasioned by the recent fire at Liverpool stands the total at £102,000, the goods destroyed being valued at £90,000 and the buildings at £6,000. A third of the whole sum was insured in two Liverpool offices—the Liverpool and London, and the Royal. Salvage estimated at 10 to 15 per cent.

SMITH O'BRIEN came passenger by the last Indian mail steamer. Not being permitted to return to Britain or Ireland, he left the steamer at Gibraltar, and will probably take up his residence in Italy.

The Arctic.

From the London Morning Post.

The frightful loss of life attending this shipwreck is plainly attributable to the insufficiency, both in point of size and number, of the boats. Had these been capable of containing both the passengers and crew, it is highly probable that order would have been preserved, and all would have had a reasonable prospect of escape. But so long as ships are sent to sea so scantily provided as the Arctic appears to have been, we must be prepared, in case of accident, to hear of occurrences similar in every element of horror to those which have created so lively a sensation upon both sides of the Atlantic.

The Arctic's Wreck—Claim for English Steamers.

From the Northern (Liverpool) Daily News.

The Arctic, with her boats cut open from her gunwale almost to her keel, floated in a fresh breeze from noon up to a quarter to 5 o'clock the same day. Here were upwards of four hours allowed to provide for the safety of her passengers; and if her crew had acted with that common humanity, which we trust British seamen will never forget, her boats might have been filled, rafts made for all that the boats could not have accommodated, and provisions to sustain life for one or two days provided for all. But instead of this, the crew deserted their ship and their commander, and left all to share one deplorable fate.

Now, we can have no desire to draw invidious distinctions between the American and British lines of steamers in the North American trade, as they would be likely to do some damage to the steam passenger traffic of our port. But since the question of safety has been raised at a distance, and by our rivals, we are bound to give the greatest merit to those to whom it is due. In the first place, Hon. SAMUEL CUNARD is the father of the ocean steam navigation of Liverpool; and, aided by the ability and untiring energy of Messrs. MACIVER, a fleet of steam-ships has been produced and sustained intact, which surpasses for its tonnage, management and efficiency, that of any other company in the world. This has not been the triumph of a nation, or a numerous company sustained by a large body of contributors, but by a few who conceived and executed the grand design. To these gentlemen, Liverpool owes a deep debt of gratitude, and all the civilized world has participated in the success of their enterprise, skill, and unremitting attention, to the wants of the two great Continents they have brought into such close and constant communication. Many have followed the lofty example of the originator and managers of the British North American Royal Steamship Line, but where can they boast of having carried 100,000 souls in perfect safety over an ocean passage of 3,000 miles? Add to this the millions worth of merchandise, specie, and postal remittances, that they are known to have carried with equal safety; and we have here a degree of superiority in these ships, the skill of their mariners, and integrity in their general management which places the merchant steam owners of England above suspicion all over the world.

The Necessity of England's Interference against the United States.

From the London Morning Star.

There is no subject on which we, as a Government, have taken greater pains, have bestowed attentive more anxiously, have made greater sacrifices, than on that of keeping on good terms with the United States. One would think that a disagreement—a difference even—was a thing impossible to attend. No sooner does such a case arise than our diplomatic corps is ransacked for a clever and able man, with American prepossessions, who is sent out with strict instructions to make things pleasant. As America—at least that part of America called the United States—is largely productive of sons with an aptitude for other people's goods, and as our goods happen as yet to lie somewhat near them, the case now occurs with considerable frequency, and matters are made up between England and the United States very cleverly—very wisely, no doubt; but, to short sighted mortals, very much to the advantage of the latter. Contrary, no doubt, to the wishes and expectations of the originators of these schemes, but rather in accordance with general experience of human nature, and very much in accordance with particular experience of United States nature, the effect of this line of conduct has been, not to create a response in the recipients in harmony with the measure dealt to them—not to raise a "ca' me ca' thee," sort of feeling—but the reverse. All the effects of our gifts on the United States is to raise their appetite—to extend it in other directions—to sharpen their teeth, widen their jaws, and increase their impudence. The comfort of this is, that it is a symptom which will lead to the cure of the disease. We cannot continue to make treaties for the purpose of admitting Americans to a share in our colonial fisheries, and allow of their laying hands on the last rich jewel of a friendly State, because this State happens to have fallen through evil government into a condition from which it is at this moment struggling to extricate itself. We shall not recognize another new boundary line favorable to the United States, in order that one of their sloops of war may, on the mere personal will of the captain, or worse still, on the instructions of the Government, burn a rising town of the last importance to us and to all commercial Europe, especially and distinctly under our protection; and having so burnt it—having, on the smallest provocation, been guilty, in the most scandalous and ruffianly manner of this cowardly action, that he should be, after an inquiry, reinstated in his command. So many and such grave actions have occupied us lately that it is likely that this passage of arms may have been forgotten by many of our readers. We will run over the facts for their benefit. Greytown is, or rather was, a rising struggling port in Central America, inhabited by a mixed race of the usual stamp, and placed entirely and absolutely under our protection. At this station, Commander HOLLINS, on board the American sloop-of-war Cyane, thought proper to demand an extravagant sum from the five hundred inhabitants—a sum which it was impossible they should raise, and which was demanded on futile grounds. Failing naturally in obtaining a sum which the inhabitants, poor people, did not possess, Commander HOLLINS judiciously removed their means of defence, issued a ridiculous proclamation, and the next day burned down the town—not a very difficult matter, as it was mostly wood. An act more cruel, gross, and piratical was never performed. We have made our remonstrance, and we receive for answer, we know not what in words, but in deed, the reappointment of Commander HOLLINS, who had been temporarily suspended by the Admiralty during an inquiry; and not his reappointment only, but his mission once more to the scene of his iniquity. This is going a little too far, and, we think, must open the eyes of our Government to the true meaning of that of the United States, to the feeling that springs up in moments of difficulty, to the rascality, the injustice, the bad faith of its policy—to the insults with which it treats us when it thinks our hands are full.

Nor is this Greytown story a solitary evidence of the license which America permits herself, or of the indulgence which she allows her appetites. We announced the other day that the United States had made another important move towards Cuba. She has obtained the cession of a Port Sumana, admirably situate in the Island of San Domingo. She has at the same time arranged with the Republic, which actually possesses that part of the Island, for the cession to her own hands. She has in short, made herself a strongholt and harbor in the finest of those islands—close to Cuba—close to Porto Rico. Such is the reward of her late attempts on the Spanish Government. The probability is that this business of Greytown will have, after all, a good effect. It will, we hope, open the eyes of our Government, and induce them to take a stronger tone with the United States than has been lately held—to explain to them distinctly how far we will submit to go, and what kind of conduct from us we will be prepared with if they exceed the line. This, we repeat, wanted, to all that is needful. America is going somewhat too fast, and requires to be checked, checked simply by a calm, and representative of force, determined to bring her to reason. As a Power, she is unwieldy; and as a judge of her own interests, is quite accessible to reason, provided it be fairly and well put. In all her present delinquencies, all her conduct at Greytown, at San Domingo, at Madrid—she will have to recede instead of advancing—will have to step back where she is looking forward. In her new port and combinations she will be side by side with Hayti—a pleasant neighborhood in all seasons. We shall look with some curiosity and interest to her progress in that position.

The European Liberals and the Western Powers.

From the London Daily News.

The negotiations of the great States of Europe have reached a stage at which it is necessary for the Liberals of all countries to watch warily where their Governments are leading them.

Notwithstanding sundry sinister rumors that have been circulated from time to time, we conscientiously believe that the great mass of the Liberal party throughout Europe have frankly and sincerely thrown themselves into the scale of the Western Powers in the present war. The Liberals have done so on the understanding that the one great question at issue has been the maintenance of national independence. Though the Liberals may differ on many questions from the Governments, they are agreed with them as to the importance of asserting this principle. Both parties have an interest in its maintenance. It is the interest of the Governments that their authority shall not be opposed or undermined by foreign intrigues; it is the interest of the Liberals that the cause of free institutions and national progress shall not be endangered by foreign violence. The tacit league between the Liberals and the Governments was concluded on the understanding that neither party, while asserting a common cause, should take advantage of the coalition to injure the other. The Liberals support the Governments in asserting national independence on the understanding that they are not to be deluded into a war in support of dynasties, while they believe that they are at war for the rights of nations. The Liberals are the champions of national independence, because they believe it most conducive to the interests both of rulers and peoples that they should be left free to adjust their mutual relations without foreign interference. Any attempt on the part of the Governments to turn the present war to account as the means of strengthening a despotic Government against its subjects would render it the duty of the Liberals to pause and reconsider their policy.

Certain recent indications of the objects and policy of Austria render it necessary to call public attention to those considerations. It is already ostentatiously proclaimed by some of the organs of Austria to the press, that "the nationality of Hungary is destroyed." The process by which this is alleged to have been effected is the Austrian Government's having made the peasants directly subject to the taxes of the State, and having compensated the nobility by allotting to them annuities out of the proceeds of this taxation. This, it is said, makes all the natives of Hungary free citizens. It is a rank juggle. The peasants will experience no relief; for the Government, to enable it to pay the annuities, will have to extort as much from the peasantry as the nobles would. And the nobles, by receiving annuities out of the State funds, will be placed at the mercy of the Government, which may amerce them in a large part of their income, upon any symptoms of insubordination on their part. Austria went to work secretly and cautiously so long as the sympathy of the French and English nations for the Hungarians was likely to be efficacious; but now, relying on the speedy realization of an entente cordiale between it and the French and English Governments, it takes courage and shows its game.

Again, a very remarkable article from the pen of M. SAINT-MARC GIRARDIN appeared in the Journal des Débats of yesterday. The article is avowedly in defence of the Austrian occupation of the Danubian Principalities. The Wallachians are told that the object of the Austrian occupation is to keep them as independent of the Sultan as Russia promised to do. But the Wallachians are warned that, in order to make them worthy of this Austrian protection, they must prove to Europe that they are a "governable State," and that they must "eschew all trafficking with the revolutionary spirit."

It is clear that Austria counts upon receiving, as the price of its alliance with the Governments of France and England, their support (direct or indirect) to its ambitious projects in Hungary and the Danubian Principalities. It is to be hoped that the Western Governments will be too wise to pay so dear a price for so indifferent a commodity. Assuredly, if they are weak enough to pay it, they must be prepared to lose that popular support which throughout the war has been the main source of their strength.

Attempted Escape of Italian Political Prisoners.

Correspondence of London Daily News.

ROME, Tuesday, Oct. 24, 1854.

The enemies of papal regime, imprisoned for their political offences in the strong castle of Palliano, near the Neapolitan frontier, were nearly affording the Government fresh cause for anxiety a few days ago, by affecting their escape from durance vile; but, as is usual in such cases, the necessity of confiding the plan to several persons was the cause of the whole conspiracy being revealed and nipped in the bud. One of the soldiers on guard received a bribe of six paols to convey a letter from one of the prisoners to another, confined in a different cell, but after executing the commission, probably reflecting that his own personal risk in the adventure was hardly compensated by the moderate sum of half-a-crown, he denounced the affair to the Governor of the castle. From this document, seized in the prisoner's cell, the plot became manifest, and one of the keepers implicated as favoring it. The prisoners were to make a hole through the wall communicating with the *corps

[illegible]

Fashions for November.

The preparations for ball and evening entertainments which have already appeared, indicate some curious ornamental combs of gold, set with precious stones. One of these combs has rather a high top of gold open-work, set with emeralds and brilliants. The new artificial flowers display some magnificent varieties. Some of the exotics have a ground of foliage made in velvet green, blond, or gold gauze, intermingled with flowers in pearl, white, or opaline blue velvet. Foliage of blue gauze, combined with fig-leaves in crape, will be a favorite employment for ball costume during the ensuing Winter. One of the new wreaths consists of tassel branches made of crape in different shades of green, the tips of the leaves being marked in gold. Another wreath, composed of laurel-leaves in crape, is mounted in the contract form, and the veins in the leaves are described by series of very small emeralds, the brilliancy of which, upon the dead crape, produces a novel and striking effect. A wreath, somewhat similar to that just mentioned, has been prepared in Paris for a lady of distinguished rank. It is composed of vine-leaves, having the veins started by exceedingly small diamonds, and the slender tendrils which here and there intervene with the foliage are formed of gold with diamonds. This wreath may be mounted in a style which may be here described. The part which surmounts the centre of the forehead is small; it gradually enlarges as it approaches the sides, and then passes round to the back of the head. It is fastened under the plait of hair at the back; and from the extremities depend sprays of foliage towards the back of the neck. A circular wreath, adapted for mourning, has just been made in Paris for the Grand Duchess STEPHANIE, of Baden. It consists of roses in black, intermingled with small bunches of grapes in gray crape; the foliage is composed of black Chinese crape. The wreath is fastened at the back of the head by a tie, formed of two sprays.

The trimming employed for the bonnet of the present season consists chiefly of flowers, feathers, and ribbon. Some of the flowers prepared expressly for trimming the new Winter bonnets are very elegant, and, as well as the foliage which accompanies them, are frequently composed of velvet and crape intermingled. We have seen a bonnet of mulberry-color velvet trimmed on one side with a spray of crape foliage and a small tuft of mauve-colored flowers, the foliage and the feathers being of the same tint as the bonnet.

Black velvet bonnets, which are again resuming favor, have a tuft of black tips attached to the edge. This tuft may be from five or six to twelve or fourteen inches in depth. If of the latter depth, it forms a veiling or demi-veil. When narrow lace is employed, it is turned back over the bonnet, at the top, and drooped at the sides only.

Jackets still hold a prominent place in the decoration of fashion. Several have lately been made of rich materials, elaborately ornamented. Jacket of dark blue, ruby, and pace-colored velvet, are ornamented with embroidery in silk or jet. The dress worn with a jacket of the above description should be of rich silk. In front, the jacket is partially open so as to display the chemisette; the sleeves are wide and not very long, and the under-sleeves corresponds with the chemisette.

Several of the cloaks lately received from Paris are trimmed with a new kind of braid three or four inches wide. This braid, which is cut on the straight grain or bendy, has a middle stripe of moire, edged on each side by a narrow border of plush. The moire stripe is either black or of some dark color, and the plush border blue, green or violet. Other kinds of braid are formed of a combination of plush, satin, and moire, and are figured with a pattern in squares, lozenges, &c. The pattern is worn of various sizes, decorating well with the dark moire ground. Rows of plush, either plain or figured, are employed for trimming cloth cloaks. Net extremely thick cloaks are lined with colored silk of a tint harmonizing with those in the trimming. They are also lightly wadded through the sleeves as well as the body of the cloak.

Sir John Franklin's Fate.

To the Editor of The Sunday Times:

SIR: Ever since Dr. KAN's account of the discovery of the remains of Sir JOHN FRANKLIN'S party appeared in the Times, I have been anxiously waiting in the hope that some notice would be taken, either by you or some of your numerous correspondents, of that part of Capt. M'CLURE'S report, published in the Times of last year, which had reference to a statement made to him by some Esquimaux to the effect that they had met with a party of "Whites," who attacked them, killed some and drove the others. They also pointed out to him the place where some of them were buried, and offered to conduct him to the spot. Capt. M'CLURE says, I remember rightly, that he was unable to take advantage of this information on account of the heavy state of the weather and the situation of his ship.

With regard to the question of how our brave countrymen came to their untimely end, I think the evidence is preponderating of their having been murdered. Besides the positive evidence to this effect of the Esquimaux reporting to Captain M'CLURE, it is hardly to be believed that starving men would prepare their food as stated, and then lie down to die without partaking of it; and certainly it is not likely that they would mutilate more than one corpse at a time. If, as these people stated to Dr. KAN, they were not the party who discovered the charnel of our countrymen, then how do they account for the possession of so much plate? Further, all the circumstances, to my mind, point to the supposition that our ill-fated countrymen, had that the possessors of the plate were themselves the authors of the foul deed.

I am, sir, yours, &c.

SUNDERLAND, Nov. 22. MEDICUS.

SPAIN.

Generals DULCE, CONCHA, and PRIM, have been named Deputies to Barcelona. Everything is quiet.

The Madrid Clamor Publico of the 20th Oct. says: "France, like England, and in accord with her, is to send a strong squadron to Cuba, to protect it, if necessary, from any attack on the part of the United States."

Negotiations are on foot for a Customs union between Spain and Portugal. This implies a reduction of the Spanish tariff.

Cholera is raging fearfully at Carcassa.

FOREIGN COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

London Markets.

For Asia.] LONDON, Friday, Nov. 2—5 P. M.

There has been more activity this week in the Colonial and Foreign Produce markets than for some time past, and SUGAR has advanced 10@15 cwt. BREADSTUFFS have ruled steady. Money is quoted lower and Stocks have advanced. [illegible]

Liverpool Markets.

For Asia.] LIVERPOOL, 11th Mo. 2d, 1854.

At our Market this morning we had a good attendance of the trade; it opened rather flat, but towards the close more doing was manifest on the part of Millers and Dealers to purchase, and the extreme rates of Tuesday may be quoted for WHEAT and FLOUR. In Corn there is no change to report; the demand, although not in very active demand, was difficult to obtain without paying an advance of 1d. to 2d. per Qr. OAT MEAL is slow sale at former rates, but OATS were more readily sold without change in value. Our arrivals for the past seven days consist of 4,042 quarters of Wheat, 2,001 quarters of Indian Corn, and 3,[illegible] barrels of Flour. Export for same period was quarters Wheat, 1,042 quarters Indian Corn, 1,458 barrels and 2,712 sacks Flour. The value of American Corn on this day's market—White Wheat 12s.@13s. 2d.; Red 11s.@11s. 6d. P. 70 lbs. Flour, Baltimore and Philadelphia, 40s. 6d.@45s. No Canadian or Beef on the market.

QUERCITRON BARK—Baltimore is quoted parcels sold at 7s. 6d. P cwt. LARD—The demand continues good, at 52s. @53s. 6d. P cwt., for consumption. Very fine parcels for delivery purposes 54s. 6d.@55s. By auction 1,000 barrels sold from 40s. 6d.@45s. 6d. P cwt., being damaged by salt water, and heating of cargo. BEEF has been in good request; about 300 tierces changed hands at former rates. BACON is also in good demand, and our stock decreasing. RICHARDSON BROTHERS & CO.

Another Circular.

For Asia.] LIVERPOOL, Friday, Nov. 3, 1854.

COTTON MARKET—We have had a steady, but not active demand for Cotton during the week. It has been sparingly met by holders, who have succeeded in obtaining an advance of 1@1-16d. P lb. on the good ordinary and middling grades. The Manchester market remains extremely dull for CLOTH, and there appears no prospect of further relief. YARNS are still miserably depressed, but it is hoped that as the arrival of goods diminish, they must give way in price. MONEY is the dear article again, and discounts are obtained in the open market at 4@5 Cent. As regards prospects, we cannot say there is, so far, much change for the better. CHICORY close at 94 P cwt. The sales of Cotton for the week are 36,000 bales, of which 6,700 are on speculation and for export, leaving 29,300 bales as the trade. The sales to-day are 7,000 bales. Market steady. We quote Fair Orleans, 6¾d.; Middling Orleans, 5 3-16d.; Fair Mobile, 6d.; Middling Mobile, 5 1-16d.; Fair Uplands, 6d.; Middling Uplands, 5 3-16d.

CORN MARKET—The Corn market was dull for the early part of the week; it closes with an improved feeling, at a decline of 1s. 6d.@2s. P qr. for Wheat, and 1s. 9 quarter in INDIAN CORN. Western Canal superfine FLOUR, 40s.@41s.; Baltimore and Philadelphia do., 42s.; Ohio do., 41s.@42s.; Sour dressing do., 37s. P bbl. White U. S. Wheat, 12s.@13s. 6d.; red and mixed do., 11s.@11s. 3d. P 70 lbs. Yellow and mixed INDIAN CORN, 32s.@40s.; white do., 42s.@44s. P 480 lbs. A. DENNISTOUN & CO.

CENSUS FOR SUBURBANS.—The editor of the Newhaven Telegraph indulges in the following remarks on the recent change in the weather in New-Haven: "Sugh! What sponsers old Winter made upon us last Wednesday night! Why, humanity curled before him like a burnt boot. Here we have been jovaling in the most delightful weather possible, thinking it had been so long continued, that somehow we would be so this day, but more abundant, when down came old Winter shouted, and puffed and blowed, and shook his heavy head at us, and pinched our ears with his icy fingers, and trod on our toes with his frozen heel, and crowned up the little streams with his cold breath, and frost our apples, and scratched our potatoes, and onions, and beets, and turnips and carrots, all just as hard as a brick."

THE GUANO TRADE.—Vessels sailed from the Chincha Islands during the month ending Sept. 30, 46 vessels, (all green-Index) registering 35,173 tons. Of the above number, 19 vessels, 11,607 tons, sailed for ports in Great Britain; 12 vessels, 8,020 tons, for ports in the United States; 10 vessels, 6,[illegible] tons, for ports in France and the continent; 3 vessels, 816 tons, for ports in Holland; 2 vessels, 676 tons, for ports in the Italian States; and 2 vessels, 1,849 tons for ports in Spain. Eight of the above vessels registering 6,[illegible] tons were American.

GENERAL MEETING OF THE FACULTY.

Annual Meeting of the Alumni Association of the Medical College.

THERE WAS a great "feed" of physicians at the Astor House on Wednesday night. The occasion was the Anniversary Dinner of the New-York Society for the Relief of Widows and Orphans of Medical Men. The company numbered not less than a hundred and twenty persons, all of whom, with the exception of perhaps half a dozen, had been authorized by the diplomas of Colleges to write M. D. after their names, and to give just as much calomel or castor oil to a sick man as their judgment may direct.

At 7½ o'clock the doors of the large dining-room were thrown open, and the company sat down to dinner. On the platform, at the head of the table, sat some of the dignitaries of the profession.

Dr. ISAAC WOOD, President of the Society, presided with much dignity and grace. On his right were Dr. BLISS, Rev. Dr. POTTS and FERRIS, A. H. WARD, Esq., and Prof. J. M. SMITH. On his left sat PETER COOPER—the soul of Reform, as every one knows—Dr. JOHN FRANCIS, looking like Dr. SAM. JOHNSON, in the day when the great SAMUEL was in his zenith,—Dr. GALEN CARTER, whose father must have been a prophet to have fallen upon so good a name for his son—and others. As for the rest, get the list of surgeons and physicians in town, clear off all irregulars—all who have the slightest odor of quackery about them—all whose extraordinary engagements already forbade attendance, and there remains a catalogue of those who sat down upon the occasion—as bloody and brave a company as HOMER'S list of heroes.

"Was my doctor, there?" you ask, reader. Certainly he was, and the most brilliant man in the room, whether you find his speech reported or not.

By actual measurement, it takes just an hour and a half so to fill the capacity of a physician, that all dishes you can bring him will taste alike, and all form no temptation to his exhausted appetite. At 9 o'clock, then, thanks were returned by one of the clergymen present, and the cloth was removed.

It would not be improper to speak a little more definitely of the ornaments of the table. A piece of pastry was placed directly before the President, representing a doctor calling upon a jaundiced patient in a yellow gown. It was very pleasantly suggestive. We have no doubt from the solemn expression of the Doctor's face that every thump of the pulse under his finger was a good shilling less in the pocket of the trusting patient. A handsome Gothic pavilion was placed in front of a famous Surgeon, whose success justifies him in thinking of a country seat and retiring. A "National Temple" stood before a little company of political Doctors. A "Column of Liberty" adorned another end of the table where were gathered a party, not one of whom, for a number of years, had been at liberty to go to Church or to Concert, to go to bed when other men go, or to lie there quietly when abed. Liberty is sweet to such—as was proved by actual tasting—when an unlucky accident cracked off "Liberty" from her candy "column." "Children with baskets"—the orphan children of deceased Doctors,—and their baskets were well filled during the evening—adorned other portions of the table.

Dr. WOOD rapped "attention," and made immediately a handsome speech. In the course of it he stated the following facts.

ANNUAL STATEMENT.

The Society was instituted in 1840, and the capital is now $16,966 72. The investments amount to $16,900, and are in Bonds and Mortgages, six in number, in sums of $4,000, two of $2,500, $2,400, $2,000, $1,800, all bearing interest at 7 per cent., leaving a small balance of $66 72 in the hands of the Treasurer. The loans are without exception on improved property in this City and (one in) Brooklyn; the ground in every instance being worth the amount of the mortgage, without regard to the improvements thereon, which are insured and policy assigned. The receipts for the past year from every source were, from donations, $242; initiation fees and annual subscribers, $260; life subscribers, $160; interest, $1,014 15; total, $1,797 15; and the disbursements, $218 28. The Society continues to carry out the benevolent purposes of its organization, in the family of one of its late members. Two gentlemen have joined the Society within the past year—W. W. Dwight and J. Foster Jenkins; and sixteen members have died since its organization, namely: John Revere, John Graham, James A. Washington, John Stearns, James McDonald, Abraham T. Hunter, Luke Barker, John B. Arden, J. Kearney Rodgers, James Cameron, William E. Miller, John R. Chapin, James Campbell, Abraham Cresvelling, William H. McNeven, and Isaac Green, the last two during the past year. The present number of members is eighty-two, of whom forty-two are life members, by the payment of $100 at one time; and forty annual, pay $10 a year. Two benefactors, constituted by the payments of $150 or upwards, have increased to nine, and three laymen are in the number.

In conclusion he gave a sentiment—

Our Society—Springing from a benevolent motive, the vigor of its youth gives promise of a good old age.

Dr. E. S. BEADLE, for Dr. BULKLEY, who had been detained, read a succinct history of the rise and progress of the Society, its aims, objects, and success thus far.

The second toast was—

Divinity, Law, and Medicine—Essential elements of civilized society; may they ever be found united to sustain the cause of truth and progress.

REV. DR. POTTS' SPEECH.

Rev. Dr. POTTS was demanded.

Dr. POTTS said he was not accustomed to speak in public—on such occasions. [Laughter.] He had the honor of attending as an orthodox clergyman—but religiously, but medically orthodox,—never yet having been able to discover in the form and position and reforms of an uneasy and shifting generation, the evidences that the wisdom of all the past was folly. He alluded to the change of public sentiment, within the medical profession, upon the great questions of religion within half a century. The charge of materialism, which was then frequently made against members of the profession, we seldom hear now. None now talk of dissecting out the human soul with a particular gland. None talk of the mind as if it were synonymous with the brain, a thing to be weighed in the scales, cut with the scalpel, or tested in a crucible.

Dr. POTTS remarked that the last time he read much in a medical book, the anatomists were surmising that it was the office of the spleen to act as a reservoir for the blood when some great excitement was driving it to more delicate internal organs. We would not be spleenetic, said he, but our profession may claim to be a sort of spleen, where when public opinion is running riot and endangering your most cherished doctrines, sound principles may rush into reservoir and be safe in our conservatism. He was comparatively young, yet within his day the time was when the clergyman in the sick room, was looked upon by the attending physician with distrust and dislike. Better notions of physchology—a sounder, mental philosophy now prevailed.

For the LAW, AUGUSTUS H. WARD, Esq., responded in an eloquent speech. The smoke of cigars rose up between him and the reporter, and the latter was not able to catch even its points.

DR. FRANCIS' SPEECH.

For Medicine, Dr. JOHN W. FRANCIS responded in his peculiar and most felicitous style. For one called upon to address such occasions so frequently, he said, it was rare indeed to have something of a literary—(It was a Latin word he used, signifying a "theme," for which we believe cattle are drives for quarantine purposes.) He confessed that he was not exactly at home in the theme. The theory in the history had been promulgated. It had not been marred by pedantry, nor defaced

[illegible]

THE RECENT MARINE DISASTER.

LATEST FROM THE WRECK.

119 BODIES RECOVERED.

SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST THE OFFICERS

FURTHER NAMES OF THE LOST.

Since the issue of the DAILY TIMES of yesterday, we have received additional intelligence from the scene of the recent disaster. The ship still lies in the same situation as before. The two survivors yet remaining at Deal were fast convalescing. Up to 3 o'clock yesterday morning, one hundred and nineteen bodies had been received at the residence of Mr. BORDEN. The sea, on Wednesday evening, was running quite high, so that it was impossible to commence the work of taking out any portion of the cargo.

The passengers on arriving in this City were received by R. A. WITTHAUS, Esq., President of the German Society and a member of the Board of Commissioners of Emigration.

The sick were conveyed immediately to Ward's Island or the City Hospital, where they are receiving proper care. The survivors Mr. WITTHAUS caused to be carried to the German Tavern, No. 76 Greenwich-street, where, by his order, they were furnished with everything necessary to make them comfortable. Mr. W. remained with the survivors until 11 o'clock on Wednesday night, and during the entire day yesterday he devoted his time to assisting them in their destitute condition. About noon he caused a notice to be placed on the different bulletin-boards at the newspaper offices, asking aid from citizens for the relief of the survivors. In response to the call our citizens had contributed nearly $1,000 at the office of Mr. WITTHAUS for the object, up to last evening. Several contributions of clothing were also received; and further contributions in aid of the sufferers can be left with Mr. WITTHAUS, at his store, No. 51 Exchange-place.

LATER FROM THE WRECK.

The following communication we received yesterday from our Special Correspondent at the scene of the disaster. It is dated DEAL BEACH, Wednesday Afternoon—4½ o'clock.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The wreck still lies in the same situation as during the past two days. Up to the present time it has not been possible to get below the hatches. A bag containing a large amount of gold was found, however, this afternoon in the ship. It has been forwarded to New-York. Up to 6 o'clock this evening, eighty-three bodies have been interred, and many more are constantly being brought from the beach. Over one hundred have been washed ashore between the wreck and Sandy Hook. Very little money has been found on the bodies. This evening the body of a man about five feet and ten inches in height, having a high forehead, sandy hair, whiskers and moustache, and dressed in a black cloth coat, satin vest, black broadcloth pants and fine boots, was picked up. It is supposed that the body must have been robbed of money and valuables, as there were neither to be found upon it. It is believed that there are many bodies between the decks. X.

Latest from the Wreck.

We subjoin a translation of a communication received yesterday afternoon by Mr. WITTHAUS from the Agent of the Commissioners of Emigration, Mr. WM. VERBRUGGEN. The letter is dated

LONG BRANCH, THURSDAY, Nov. 16—2 A. M.

R. A. WITTHAUS, Esq.: The only remaining survivors at Deal now are Mrs. AMELIA DANZ, and a man whose leg is broken. Both are receiving every possible attention, and will be conveyed to New-York as soon as they have recovered sufficiently to admit of their being removed. Her brother, THEODORE KAMERER, (also one of the survivors,) is now at Eatontown, N. J., where he is receiving every attention. His residence is at No. 305 Market-street, Philadelphia. The sick took their departure from here yesterday, in spring wagons, under the charge of Captain BOWEN. They will probably be in New-York to-day. (Wednesday,) in order to identify the bodies, I have shewn those which have not been interred to some of the more intelligent passengers, but they were not able to recognize any of them. In most cases the sand has greatly disfigured the bodies. The eyes, face, lips and fleshy parts of the bodies have been removed by this cause in very many instances. I am in hope that the papers found with the passengers will throw light upon the names of some of these lost. By various papers found upon different bodies we have identified the following persons:

SAMUEL ROTHSCHILD, (has a cousin named Hr. ROTHSCHILD in Savannah.)

FERDINAND DEITEL, (had a bill of exchange for $241.40, dated Bremen, Sept. 15, 1854, and drawn on C. J. BICHTAL of New-York.)

JOHANNA KRICKS, (had two bills of exchange—one for $140, and the other for $60, drawn by LEZ. MANN OPPENHEIMER, Brunswick, on MEYER & SCHUCKER, New-York.)

These bills, together with all articles of value, have been taken care of by Captain WOOLEY. One hundred and nineteen have been put in the coffins up to the present time. They have been labeled according to your directions. I have made an inventory of each body, describing the apparel and features so far as I was able. The following may serve as an illustration of the manner in which it has been done:

"No. —, female; small stature; about sixteen years of age; brown hair; blue calico dress; under clothing marked L. N.; three two-guilder, three ten-dollars in gold, and three one-dollar gold pieces."

The sea has been shoaling so high that Captain BOWEN has only been able to save a possible 40 the starting and the sailing of the New Era up to the greatest time. The crew think that the smoke may [illegible]

[illegible]

Statement of August Schwarzbaum.

I am from Schwarzbaum, Grand Duchy [illegible]. During the fortnight prior to the disaster of the vessel, the chemist's wife passed her time, day and night, in the cabin. Her husband was allowed to remain in the cabin about a week after the ship taken up her quarters there. It was a common report among the passengers that the mate and the chemist's wife slept together. She was a German woman of from 20 to 24 years of age. I was on deck during most of the night prior to the stranding of the vessel. At 4 o'clock the second mate went below, and been upon terms of great intimacy with the wife of a German chemist, who was on board. The chemist and the wife were [illegible] death of New-York, and could speak English. This fact was a matter of common conversation, and the first time the chemist's wife and the chief mate slept together was not attempted to be kept secret. During the fortnight prior to the stranding of the vessel, through the intercession of the mate, the chemist's wife had been permitted to occupy the cabin. Her husband seemed to be entirely unable to detect their embrace. It was stated among the passengers that Captain HAENEL had also a German girl in the cabin, whom he had given a free passage to America, and with whom he was living, upon terms of similar intimacy. Similar conduct was charged against the second mate.

Another passenger, named SUSANNA HEINEMANN, from Hubsfeldt, Hesse Cassel, confirms the statement of SCHWARZBAUM. Mr. LOUIS HEINE, another passenger, makes a similar statement to the above, so far as regards the facts connected with the alleged conduct of the officers.

NEW-YORK: FRIDAY, NOV. 17, 1854.

The Times for the Month.

The DAILY TIMES, (Morning and Evening) is issued every day except Sundays, and sent to subscribers at THREE CENTS per copy.

The WEEKLY TIMES is published on Tuesday and Friday of each week, containing all the reading matter of the Daily, and is sent to subscribers at TWELVE SHILLINGS per annum.

The WEEKLY TIMES contains a selection from the reading matter of the Daily, and is sent to mail subscribers at TWO DOLLARS per annum. This paper will be sent for SIXTEEN DOLLARS.

Payment in all cases must be made in advance.

To Correspondents.

Communications with regard to news items, should be addressed to the Editor; those for publication, but not a guarantee of the truth of the statements made.

We cannot undertake to return manuscripts that may be sent for publication.

Volunteers among the subscribers, who may be in any part of the world, is solicited. If used, it will be liberally paid for.

Who is to be Governor?

The corrections of yesterday reverse the scale, and CLARK is now, by our revised table, 170 votes ahead. The returns are nearly all reported officially. We have taken the highest figures claimed for SEYMOUR in the City and in Kings County. The Cattaraugus return is now reliable.

The Soule Question Settled!

We have a private letter from a well-informed source in London, written at the last moment before the closing of the mail, saying that "the French Government has withdrawn all objection to Mr. Soule's passing through France." It is also stated that the English Government feel a good deal of uneasiness about the matter, on various grounds. It dreaded the reaction which the French Emperor's treatment of Mr. SOULE would create towards the Western powers; and was especially alarmed at his readiness to enter into new quarrels while in alliance with England. If our correspondent's statement as to the issue of the matter is true,—as we have reason to believe it is,—the result has very probably been brought about by the intervention or advice of the English Government.

From another private letter from London, written also on the eve of the steamer's departure, and based on telegraphic dispatches from Paris, we learn the following facts corroborating the above:

"LOUIS NAPOLEON had a personal interview with Mr. MASON, in which he withdrew the remarks upon Mr. SOULE's passage through the French territory, disclaiming all intention of insult to the United States Government in the person of its Envoy. The manner of the Emperor was dry and cut, and it is believed that this disclaimer was a diplomatic move, understood to have been dictated by England, the English Cabinet advising that the military against Mr. SOULE, personally, should be taken, if at all, by their Government. The banquet proposed to be given to Mr. SOULE by the Refugee Republicans in London will probably afford the Home Office an opportunity for action."

The News from Europe.

The Asia brought us three days' later news from all parts of Europe, yesterday. The intelligence is interesting, but not specially important. The affair of Mr. SOULE continues to excite attention, and to awaken more or less anxiety. According to the letter of our own Paris correspondent, no reply had been made, at the time he wrote, to the demand of Mr. MASON upon the French Government for explanations. Newspaper accounts state, on the one hand, that Mr. SOULE is known to have been implicated in the efforts of the Liberals to excite a general insurrection in Europe,—a thing quite probable in itself,—and, on the other hand, that the French Government intends to give assurances that in his exclusion it intended no disrespect to the United States.

From the seat of war there is intelligence of fresh fights, in which the Allies are reported to have sustained reverses. The news comes, however, through Russian channels, and is very naturally discredited by the English journals. There seems, however, to be no doubt that no advantage has yet been gained by the allied troops. A dispatch from the British Ambassador at Constantinople states that the Russians, with 30,000 troops, attacked the allied troops, at Eupatoria, on the 25th, but were repulsed with heavy loss. The Russian account of the same affair states that the Russians took four redoubts and eleven guns, and that their cavalry made a severe and successful charge upon the English. The siege is continued, and it was believed that the fortress must yield before long.

From other parts of Europe there are various items of intelligence of considerable interest which are given in our columns.

Attention—Uncle Sam!

The Postmaster of the City of New-York is respectfully requested to call at the office of the DAILY TIMES and receive a package of letters endorsed for Providence, R. I.—which, instead of being sent to their destination, were left in the mail bag and sent to this Times office, through the gross and inexcusable carelessness of the Post-Office Clerk. The fact that such an accident as this could occur, shows with what immeasurable carelessness business is transacted in some departments of the public service. The mail bag containing these, with other letters, was hastily and carelessly emptied, and thrown aside without first ascertaining whether all its contents were out or not. When the bag was sent to the TIMES office for the small papers, this package of letters came to hand. How long it has been delayed already, and what derangements of business they have been occasioned by it, it is of course impossible to say, but merchants and others in Providence will probably be able to ascertain.

We receive frequent complaints from various quarters of the country, that letters containing money sent to this office, have never been heard from. We had some to believe, in consequence of the frequency of these reports, that they were stolen on the way. This may still be so;—but after our discovery of this letter-package, we are prepared for almost anything.

Mr. Postmaster FOWLER will please step up to the TIMES office and reclaim his letters.

"The Good Old Times."

It is a common and conventional error among the British people, to praise "the wisdom of our ancestors;" to be eulogistic on the social virtues of "bluff King HAL," and to the golden days of "good Queen BESS," and to speak of "the good old times" as if the Present were in no way equal to the Past, as if HENRY VIII. was not a wife-murderer, and ELIZABETH TUDOR a despot. Of all English Statesmen living, we should have thought Sir WILLIAM MOLESWORTH,—once a leader of the extreme Radical party, and editor of the works of HOBBES, the smacking philosopher of Malmesbury—would have eschewed the slang and cant of heaping praise upon "the good old times." Yet he did so praise them a few weeks ago when speechifying at Edinburg, (on receiving the complimentary freedom of that ancient and redolent metropolis,) and we can only conjecture that "a change came o'er the spirit of his dream" since he became an office-holder, thereby showing the truth of MOORE'S couplet:

> As bees on flowers alighting, cease their hum,
> So, settling upon places, Whigs grow dumb.

"The good old times" thus eulogized by an English Cabinet-Minister, were times in which arbitrary power was all, and the common rights of man were nothing. The wonder is, monarchs and nobles being so weak and wicked, that the people should have endured them. Think of that purple tyrant, HENRY VIII., of whom it was truly said that he never spared man in his wrath nor woman in his lust; of that cruel creature, his eldest daughter, chronicled to all time as "Bloody MARY;" of that wilful tyrant ELIZABETH, who murdered her cousin MARY of Scotland, because she was beautiful, and decapitated her own lover, ESSEX, because she was jealous of him; of JAMES STUART, "the wisest fool in Christendom," whom even the courtly pen of WALTER SCOTT could not represent as other than mean and cowardly; of his children, who expiated their crimes—one on the scaffold and the other in miserable exile. Think of these rulers, and ask how "the good old times" can be praised.

The historic page records how deficient in all that makes a people happy, intelligent and prosperous the English were in those lauded times. The luxuries, the comforts, the very necessities of our daily life were wanting there. Rank and Wealth lorded it over honest and humble industry. The nation was in a state of serfdom. Royalty and nobility dealt with "the lower orders" as if they were brute beasts; they buffeted them, despised them, persecuted them, viciously hated and strongly coerced them. And, "in the good old times," this was humbly submitted to. We speak not of the earlier periods of British history, when the WILLIAMS, the HENRYS, the EDWARDS, and the RICHARDS roughly ruled, but of later periods. Of the time when virtuous MORE was sacrificed, when SPENSER and SHAKESPEARE wrote, when RALEIGH fought and was executed, when MILTON composed his immortal epic, when SIDNEY fell on the scaffold, when DRYDEN flourished and BUTLER starved—of the two centuries which included the events of British history, from the accession of the TUDORS at Bosworth Field to the deposition of the STUARTS, consummated by the defeat on the banks of the Boyne Water.

In those times, women of even the more exalted ranks could do little more than barely sign their names. A nobleman was considered erudite who could spell with comparative correctness. The bulk of the middle classes were ill-informed—the laboring masses were almost wholly unable to read and write. Profligacy was the practice of the higher orders—intrigue the apparent business of their life. CHARLES II. increased the peerage by making Dukedoms for his illegitimate children, and set public example of debauchery unprecedented, even in France under the Regent ORLEANS. Yet every Sabbath this man was prayed for, by order of an act of Parliament, as the people's "most religious and gracious King," the liturgy thus making clergy and congregation utter a glaring falsehood. The evil example infected all classes, and spread all through the social system. But "the good old times," which Sir WILLIAM MOLESWORTH regretfully refers to, saw nothing wrong in this; they adopted the State aphorism that "The King can do no wrong." A slavish doctrine this, and a fitting subject for future illustration—it is too copious for us now.

Arts, science, Government, letters, and, above all, the popular knowledge of popular rights were kept under, in "the good old times." Such a thing as a Free Press could not exist in those days. There was neither freedom of action, speech, nor thought. One unfortunate printer who had published four lines of pleasant rhyme, expressing a hope that Queen ELIZABETH would marry, to provide an heir and successor to the Crown, was considered to have treated "the Queen's most excellent Majesty" with too much freedom, was taken up, prosecuted, tried, and condemned to lose his hand. This cruel sentence was actually carried into effect, in the heart of London, (on a scaffold in Charing Cross,) the public executioner chopping off the victim's right hand, which severed member was subsequently presented to the Queen, who had insisted on seeing that the sentence had been carried out. Yet, one of the Cabinet Ministers of Queen VICTORIA praises "the good old times," in which humanity was thus abominably treated.

It may be bad taste on our side, (considering that Sir WILLIAM MOLESWORTH is a Member of Parliament and a Privy Councillor, a Member of Parliament and a Cabinet Minister,) but we do think that the days in which we live are better, by a great deal, than those which have passed by. We have liberty of speech, a free press, equal laws, and a tolerable share of personal freedom. If we want to travel, the steam locomotive takes us as far in one hour, as was painfully performed between sunrise and sunset, on bad roads, in the time of the TUDORS, or even of the STUARTS. Do we desire to cross the world of waters which divides the New World from the Old, we can do it in ten days—a period often consumed, before FULTON's application of steam as a motive power, in the transit between Liverpool and Dublin. If we want intelligence, the electric fluid itself—that which our FRANKLIN snatched from Heaven—is our vassal, and brings us news almost as rapidly as Thought itself can speed. (What would have been said, in "the good old times," at the particulars of a battle fought in the Black Sea being transmitted across Europe to London, and thence to New-York, in twenty days?) If we desire to obtain instruction or entertainment for the studious or the leisure hour, Machinery cheapens, by multiplying, the productions of human intellect, and books—a rarity in former days—are at our hand at a cost which is marvelously low. Or, if we ask for a record of occurrences, with comments on the transactions and politics of the whole world, there are newspapers, nearly unknown and always shackled in the olden time, which spread knowledge through the land, and are themselves the handmaids of civilization:—particularly and disinterestedly we can commend the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES in this respect! In a word, the day-laborer of the present day is happier, wiser, freer, better informed, better clothed, better housed and better fed than even the proud nobles of England were under HENRY TUDOR.

Therefore, content with this situation of affairs and of society, we really cannot endorse Sir WILLIAM MOLESWORTH'S rather mal-apropos eulogy of "the good old times." Give us the present time of Progress, and the future of something even more superior than what we now enjoy. To the servants of a fading monarchy we leave all regrets for the Past. We are proud to battle under a banner which covers Humanity at large, and is inscribed with our own State motto—"Excelsior."

The Musical Celebrities.

There are but few who will not regret it, when it is too late, if they do not avail themselves of the opportunity now presented to our citizens, of hearing the finest singers of the world, on a stage and in a house adapted to display their powers to the best advantage. GRISI, with her majestic impersonations of a tragic queen, and who has long stood confessedly at the very summit of her art, MARIO who has no equal, SUSINI who almost launches upon us the thunders of LABLACHE, and BADIALI the exquisite actor and magnificent singer, whose enthusiasm always kindles his audience, and whose imagination adds a new charm of romance to the scenes he enacts. Certainly no stage in London, Paris or St. Petersburg, or elsewhere, is now so adequately filled. And yet there are seats at our Opera-house which are not occupied. The temporary suspension of the opera—the possibility that these great actors might leave us for European audiences—have taught us that there is danger in longer delay, if we would hear them before they pass from the stage, for it is not likely that GRISI or MARIO will ever visit us again after their return.

It is certain that none of these singers ever gave forth their voices in a theatre which carried more faithfully to each one in the audience, every note and modulation. It is understood that MARIO has said that he never sang in a house before, where he did not perceive some portion of his voice return upon him." The science of acoustics is a difficult and intangible one. Its principles do not seem to have been so precisely ascertained as those of other sciences. The architect may judge with certainty, from his plans, of other qualities of his work. Its appearance, form, decorations, are as familiar to him as the foundation is laid, as after the key is ready for delivery. He cannot be mistaken in these. But what will be the qualities of the structure for purposes of sound, whether it will transmit a whisper or drown a stentor, is a question to be surely settled only by actual experiment after the building is erected. Shrewd guesses, beforehand, are often sadly disappointed. We esteem it, therefore, if not a great triumph of art, at least a fortunate instance of luck, that, in so vast and costly a theatre, the most delicious and softened note penetrates to every nook. Indeed, there seems, so far as hearing is concerned, but very little choice in seats.

In appearance and beauty, we are assured that it is not transcended by any Theatre or Opera-house in Europe—that we have one department of display not equaled by them; for there the galleries are comparatively shallow, and the tenants of the boxes are concealed—while here every individual lends his presence to the scene, and all the charm of dress and beauty enhances the general effect. This Opera-house, with its beautiful and hanging dome, its fresh, artistic and charming scenery, its ample auditorium, and a New-York audience, is a fairy scene that well repays a visit, even though the best voices of the world were not upon the stage.

It is a House that places our City within the circle of musical visitation, and will entitle us to hear all the celebrities of the Old World. It has seemed to us a curious fact, that while Italy is the birthplace of almost all the great singers, she rarely hears her idolized children in the days of the splendor of their enchanting gifts; for, as soon as these are made known, they are wafted to other lands, where gold is given freely as the most emphatic plaudits for the pleasure bestowed. A comedy [illegible] Germany, Russia and England. Now, we, at last, in New-York, have an Opera-house commensurate to the needs of a free representative, and who can deny, that with the first Tenor of the world, a Prima Donna uniting high capabilities and culture of voice with the grandest acting, a Baritone whose style secures us of the chivalry and nobility of the man, and a Basso with an organ of tremendous compass and power, we may enjoy this most poetic form of social amusement in all its fascination and perfection.

Whether this will be continued to us, and new Operas brought out, will depend, we presume, upon the earnestness and sympathy with which our music-lovers shall come up to its support. No one can say but that the Directors of the Academy of Music have, at much cost and labor, done their part in presenting so great a privilege to every one who wishes.

The County Canvass.

The Board of County Canvassers yesterday decided that no power is vested in them to go behind the returns of Election as furnished by the District Inspectors. This resolution was arrived at with but a single dissenting voice, and the disputed question of the Mayoralty election must be decided, if at all, by the Courts. It seems to be clear that the Canvassers are not possessed of the power to impeach the accuracy of Election returns. They can only detect discrepancies and call upon the Inspectors to correct manifest errors. Beyond this, their functions cease.

Dramatic.

BURTON'S THEATRE.—An exceedingly powerful drama, called the "Upper Ten and the Lower Twenty," was produced here last night, and met with complete success. The incidents and not the plot are the strong points of the play. They are worked up with considerable skill, and display dramatic intensity of no ordinary character.

The hero is a Mr. Christopher Crockpatch, (BURTON,) a gentleman possessed of a trusting disposition and a young wife. The latter deserts him for one Syberite Simper, (JORDAN,) with whom she flies to Europe, and the former is changed, partly by insanity and partly by intemperance, into a disposition of hate and retributive vengeance. Syberite Simper returns in the second act, under the impression, conveyed to him by the ordinary reports, that Christopher is dead. He assumes a social position on the strength of his wealth, and enjoys life in company with his wife and a child born to him while in refuge. Christopher, of course, is not dead, and turns up in the character of an inebriate lunatic; unexpectedly meets (without being recognized,) his false wife, her paramour, and their child. He thinks for revenge, and with devilish instinct, selects the child as the instrument therefor. A fire affords him the opportunity of entering the dwelling of Syberite, and in the general confusion he bears it away. In the next act we have Christopher and the child—the one a drunken beggar, the other a seller of apples. Syberite's wife—if we may so call her—is plunged in agony at the loss of her daughter, and her punishment begins. The possession of some property belonging to Christopher, induces Syberite to forge a necessary document, and as he requires an unscrupulous witness, he seeks one amongst the inebriates. By accident he falls on Christopher himself, and not recognizing the wreck before him, falls into the snare. In the fourth act we find Christopher, on whom misery and drink have done their worst. The child dies; the father, in an effort to escape the police, (he has been denounced by Christopher as a forger,) perishes in the river, and Mrs. Simper learns that the poor dead beggar girl whom she has mourned, is her own daughter, and the shattered being before her, her too trusting husband, Christopher Crockpatch.

The situations throughout are good. There is abundant action, and never too much dialogue. The latter contains some excellent local hits, and is smoothly and effectively written, more so indeed, than any original play we have yet had at Mr. BURTON'S.

Some of the characters are admirably drawn, and display much individuality. Christopher to a certain extent, is conventional, but there is great force displayed in the portraiture. Zeke Rupheart, (JOHNSON,) a New-York boy, and Nancy Nation, (Miss HOUGH,) a real Connecticut girl, are the most successful realizations of the author. They are thoroughly American and perfectly natural.

The drama was played admirably. Mr. BURTON as Christopher, a purely melo-dramatic character, departed from his usual line, and made a highly successful impression in a different one. Mr. JOHNSTON as Zeke was excellent, and Mrs. HOUGH as Nancy proved unquestionably that she is the best Yankee girl on the stage.

The "Upper Ten and Lower Twenty" was a genuine success, and deservedly so. It is, so far as our memory serves us, the best written and most powerfully constructed drama on the American stage. A long and brilliant run will, we hope, encourage the author to a fresh effort.

Mr. BURTON announced it for repetition, and stated that it was from the pen of Mr. THOMAS DE WALDEN, author of the "Filibusters," produced here a short time ago.

Boston in Eighteen Four and in Eighteen Fifty-four.

Boston in eighteen four was a great city, in the estimation of the Bostonians of that day, but what was it in comparison to the Boston of eighteen fifty-four! In magnitude, in population, in opulence, in expenditure, what was it to the Boston of our time? A mole hill to Olympus! We are not, however, in a position just now to institute a comparison between the magnitude, the population, and the opulence of the departed Boston, and those of the living city; but the Boston Transcript has put us in possession of a document which enables us to contrast certain items in the expenditure of the former with corresponding items in the expenditure of the latter; and from this contrast a tolerable idea may be formed of the relative importance of ancient and modern Boston. The document in question is of the highest authority, being nothing less than the printed report of BENJAMIN SUMNER, Esq., who was Town Treasurer and Collector of the said city exactly fifty years ago, and who has supplied us, in this report, with information concerning the public disbursements of the Bostonians in those days, which is at once curious and valuable.

An educated people is indispensable to the stability of republican institutions, and Boston has ever marked her sense of the truth of that proposition, by making ample provision for the education of her citizens. But what is ample? The Bostonians of eighteen four expended $16,687 11 in support of school-houses and in payment of school-masters, and doubtless plumed themselves not a little on having done so. Yet what would be the astonishment of the men of that generation, could they rise from their graves at hearing of the enormous sum which the Bostonians of eighteen fifty-four have granted for the same purposes? How the familiars would gape and wonder, to hear the present Town Treasurer and Collector of the American Athens read from his rep[illegible] the sum of $[illegible] for educational objects! How they would stare at the idea of the City of Boston [illegible] the munificence of the very town which their own [illegible] good sense had hailed for its magnificent appropriation! But these and numerous other items, which we [illegible] of the educational views of the men of their day and generation, they did well and deserve honor.

As every human community has its dozen of evil and contemners of the law, so every human community must have its preventers of crime and apprehenders of criminals. But contentin grow virtuous and depraved, as they grow opulent and luxurious; and the force which is equal to the maintenance of order among a people of simple and primitive habits, is usually unable to discharge that duty in a great and licentious city. The case of Boston in eighteen four and in eighteen fifty-four, is a striking example of the truth of these observations. In eighteen four, indeed as well as in eighteen fifty-four, she had her evil doers, and her Doeberries, but how vast the difference between her expenditures in the former, and the latter period, on account of police! In eighteen four her expenditure under this head was only $6,267 61; while in the year ended the 1st of May eighteen fifty-four, it amounted to $67,903 96! That is, it cost the Boston of our days nearly fifteen times as much to put down evil doers and keep peace and order in her streets, as it did the Boston of half a century back! The former expends over thirty times as much on the education of her people as the latter did, and yet the citizens of the latter were nearly fifteen times more virtuous and loyal than the citizens of the former! Could the church-yard Bostonians awake to consciousness, how they would exult at the superior merits of the men of their generation!

The appropriations of Boston in eighteen four and in eighteen fifty-four, for the payment of her municipal and judicial officers, illustrate the tendency of Governments to become expensive and burdensome, as cities and nations grow opulent and old. In eighteen four, the city and judicial officers of Boston were glad to discharge their functions for the sum of $3,854 22; but in the year ending the 1st of May, eighteen fifty-four, the successors of these gentlemen had to be paid $66,232 96 for performing the same duties! That is, the Bostonian officials of our time have to receive sixteen fold more for their services than did their predecessors of eighteen four! And yet we venture to assert that the men of eighteen four were more excellent and efficient functionaries than the men of eighteen fifty-four—and that the rate of remuneration received by the latter, is just in proportion to the volume of their corruption and non-efficiency.

Let us make one more contrast ere we conclude. The amount of property destroyed by fire, in a great City, indicates the extent to which negligence and incendiarism prevail among its inhabitants. But the appropriations made at different periods by a City, for the support of its Fire Department, are very good indices to the necessity which exists at those periods for such organizations. Now what were the expenditures of Boston in eighteen four, and in eighteen fifty-four, on account of her Fire Department? In eighteen four it was only $1,441 65; while in the year ending the 1st May, eighteen fifty-four, it amounted to about $70,000! The appropriation, in the latter period, was actually fifty times greater than in the former—the amount of property destroyed by fire, and the prevalence of negligence and incendiarism, being probably in an equal ratio!

We have contrasted the expenditure of the Boston of eighteen four with that of the Boston of eighteen fifty-four, on account of education, police, government and fire. And what is our conclusion from all these contrasts? Our conclusion is that in the Boston of our days, notwithstanding her magnificent appropriation for educational purposes, crime is fifteen times more prevalent, government sixteen times more burdensome, and the destruction of property by fire fifty-fold greater than in the Boston of half a century back; and that in the former the evils arising from opulence, luxury, and the influx of foreigners, have gone far to counteract the influence of schools, and the labors of school-masters.

Literary.

Mr. JAMES C. DERBY, of this City, is about to issue from his press, in elegant artistic style, a choice and beautiful volume, entitled "Lilies and Violets; Or, Flowers of Thought, in Prose and Verse, on the True Graces of Maidenhood." The work will comprise the selectest productions of the best authors of modern times, illustrating and enforcing the true graces of maidenhood, arranged with excellent taste and discrimination; and besides these, there are some thirty or forty gems of the most attractive stamp, expressly prepared for or contributed to its pages, by some of the most eminent and popular belles-lettres writers in the country. The volume commences with a Poem, of rare beauty of sentiment and diction, from the pen of the editress,—a gifted Massachusetts lady, with the sweet acronym of "ROSALIE BELL,"—who also contributes a Prologue and Epilogue to each of the several divisions of the book, viz.: Æsthetic, Intellectual, Affectional, Domestic, and Devotional.

We believe the literary design of this work as well as the elegant mechanical execution contemplated, are such as will place it, on the score of originality, taste and adaptedness, far above the many common-place books for young ladies which have heretofore had their day for want of better,—and secure for it universal favor, as a gift book, among all classes and at all seasons.

M. NICOLARDOT, in his lately-published "Domestic and Monetary Affairs of Voltaire," undertakes to prove that VOLTAIRE was sordid, grasping and dishonest. Among the instances he quotes, is an anecdote preserved by MARMONTEL. The philosopher was bargaining with a dealer for a hunting-knife, and offered eighteen francs instead of a louis, which was asked. The man stuck to his price, and averred that to abate a sou would be to do wrong to his children. "You have children?" exclaimed VOLTAIRE. "Yes, five; three boys and two girls, the youngest of whom is twelve years old." "Well, we must see if we can get situations for the boys and husbands for the girls. I have friends at court and credit in public offices. So, my good man, let us finish this bargain. There are your eighteen francs." But all this cajolery was not effectual, and the hunting-knife was at length bought for a louis.

The Episcopal School Union and Church Book Society republish, from the edition of the London Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, the late R. E. NICHOLAS' admirable Help to the Reading of the Bible. It treats plainly and pleasantly of the authority and purpose of the Bible, the fulfillment of prophecy, and the rules for interpretation; sketches succinctly the history of the Jews, and gives an account of the books of the Old and New Testaments. Maps, a chronological table, and a full index, enhance its value.

M. EUGENE BRIFFAULT, who some years ago was an active contributor to the light and slight literature of Paris, died the other day. He had for a considerable period been disabled from production, having fallen into a state of mental imbecility.

The death of Right Hon. JAMES GRATTAN, son of the celebrated orator GRATTAN is announced. Some years ago, Mr. GRATTAN wrote a series of papers in the New Monthly Magazine—but the deceased was better known as a man of Parliament than a man of letters.

The Athenæum compliments Prof. UPHAM on the style in which he prepared his Life, &c., of Madame GUYON.

CLARK, AUSTIN & SMITH issue a school edition of Mrs. Cobb's Astronomy, Physiology, and Hygiene—a small manual for young scholars.

BENTLEY has issued the Seventh Edition of PRESCOTT'S Peru.

A SPOOKY ADVENT STORY.—A correspondent at Manchester, N. H., says that a few days ago a lady in that vicinity, and a firm believer in the doctrine of the Millerites, went to repository to be ascension on the 1st inst. She did an aged relative an affectionate farewell. The Millerite, upon taking leave, told the old lady with much solemnity that on the morrow she would "go up." Her relative, whose sense of hearing is not very acute, not quite understanding her as to the place to which her young friend was bound, exclaimed with an earnestness and simplicity peculiar to aged people, "Well, ——, you will come down again on Thanksgiving, won't you?"

NEW-YORK WEEKLY TIMES.

Contents for Saturday, Nov. 18.

Total loss of the ship New Era and destruction of 325 lives—Loss of the steamer Genesee.
Affairs in Mexico—Acquittal of the Revolutionists.
Important from the Sandwich Islands—British Protectorate withdrawn.
Letters from France, by Dix Tiste.
Letters from London—European Affairs.
Washington Correspondence on the Eastern Question.
Later news from all parts of Europe.
Later and very important from California.
Know-Nothingism—Speech of John M. Clayton.

EDITORIALS.

The Washington Union on Judge Benson—The Foreign News—A National Know-Nothing Party—Important Movement—The Issue—Mr. Soule's Case—Signs of Better Times—To the Defeated—A Governor for Utah—The Slave Trade—Important Trial—Dr. Kane's Rescue—The Temperance Game—Dr. Graham—Who is Governor?—Congress of American Diplomatists at Brussels—The Battle of Alma and the Mexican Campaign—Alcohol in France—Signs of new Expeditions—California News—Mormon Advice and Sentiment—The Latest News—Curious, if True—American Merchants in China.

COMMERCIAL—A fully prepared statement of the Stock, Money and Market transactions of the week, prepared expressly for this paper. Weekly Statement of the Banks of the City of New-York.

THE WEEKLY TIMES is published on Saturdays, at the low price of TWO DOLLARS per annum, in advance; the single copies; Five copies for $7 50; Ten copies for $15, will be sent to ONE POST-OFFICE ADDRESS. Single copies may be had at the counter, in wrappers, ready for mailing, at 6¼ cents each.

☞ The postage on this paper to any part of the United States is 26 cents per annum, and within the State of New-York is 13 cents. Published by RAYMOND, HARPER & CO., No. 128 Nassau-st.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

GREAT BARGAINS.

CARPETINGS 25 PER CENT LESS THAN SEASON PRICES.—Elegant velvet and tapestry carpeting from the recent large auction sales, now selling for less than the cost of importation.

New styles velvet, 88c. to 1t. per yard.
New styles tapestry, 62c. to 75c. per yard.
New styles Brussels, 62c. to 75c. per yard.
New styles 3-ply, 50c. to 62c. per yard.
New styles superfine ingrain, 50c. to 75c. per yard.
Ingrain, 25c. to 50 per yard.
Also, a large stock of new patterns oil cloth, and all other goods pertaining to the trade usually kept.
SMITH & LOUNSBERRY, No. 259 Broadway, near Grand-st., above stairs.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEPOT FOR THE SALE of DESILLER'S CELEBRATED VEGETABLE PILLS FOR FEVER AND AGUE.—Owing to the unprecedented demand for this new specific for fever and ague, a wholesale and retail depot has been opened at No. 241 Broadway, nearly opposite the Tabernacle. The inventor of the remedy, Mr. DESILLER, will be in constant attendance and advice to meet the particular cases of fever and ague patients will be given gratuitously by him.

These pills are warranted to cure the worst cases.

Orders from the City trade, and from distant purchasers are respectfully solicited.

C. D. DESILLER, Agent, No. 241 Broadway.

FURS! FURS!—LADIES' FURS OF EXTRA QUALities, and of our manufacture only, consisting of Cloak, Victorines, Cuffs and Collars, in all the known varieties and fashions of the season.
LEARY & CO.,
Hatters, Astor House, Broadway.

WINTER, 1854.—4,000 OVERCOATS, TALMAS, PALETOTS, and Sentouts.
2,000 Business Coats, Frocks, Sacks and Dress Coats.
1,000 Pairs, of French, English and American Cassimeres.
500 Vests, of Velvet, Satin, Cashmere, Cloth, &c.
A very large and select stock of Furnishing Goods, such as Under wear, Shirts, Shawls, Hose, Gloves, &c., &c., together with about 4,000 garments for Boys of better class, consisting of Overcoats, Sacks, Frocks, Vests, Pantaloons, &c., the most extensive and choice assortment of Boys' Clothing and Furnishing Goods for Men and Boys ever got up in this City. Will be sold during the remainder of the season, at cheaper rates, as a part of our system is to hold no goods over from season to season.
DEVLIN & CO.,
Nos. 258, 259, and 260 B'way, corner Warren-st.

PIANOS AND MELODEONS.—HORACE WATERS' improved Pianos—having greater power, brilliancy, and firmness of tone; elasticity of touch, beauty and durability of make. Pianos from other manufacturers, including Gilbert & Co.'s Premium Pianos, with or without the Æolian, with less finance and circular notes; Hallet & Cummings's Pianos, (of the old firm of Hallet & Co.,) D. D. H. W. Smith's celebrated Melodeons, Melodeons in great variety, from $60 to $150; Pianos, $30, $35, $40, $50, $60, $75, $80, $100, $125, &c., to $175. Beautiful Pianos, which have been rented for a short time, will be sold very low. Music and instruments generally. A large assortment of music for sale. Cash paid for second-hand Pianos. Pianos with the Æolian, to rent some months, and allowed for on sale. Cash paid for second-hand Pianos. Pianos to rent. Cash paid for second-hand Pianos.
HORACE WATERS, No. 333 Broadway.

A NEW DISCOVERY—TO ABOLISH INTEMPERANCE AND DEBRIEFING—To cure the sick, and make every one the watch case a delicious beverage, that will invigorate but not intoxicate.

DR. HAM'S INVIGORATING SPIRIT.—This delicious beverage, will entirely cure morbid appetite for intoxicating drinks; not those, whose nerves have become weak, sick, and unstrung, from the effects of intoxication, but to give this miraculous remedy one trial, in a few days its effects will be experienced; it quickly removes bad spirits, sour taste in the mouth, heartburn, dyspepsia, nervousness, &c. Prepared only by the inventor, at $1 per bottle, RADWAY & CO., No. 162 Fulton-st. Agents, Mrs. HAYES, No. 139 Fulton-st., Brooklyn. Sold by Druggists.

LACE CURTAINS AND DRAPERIES.—A. & E. M. TOWLE & CO. have received an invoice of high lace curtains in vandyke and other styles, to which they invite the attention of the trade in the City; and also, a large assortment of plain and $2 50, which cost them and $3 to sell at $2 per pair. Also, embroidered curtains and bands of every description.

Brocha and woolen shawls will be opened TO-DAY, 1,000 brocha long and square shawls, from $10 to $30 of the choicest designs; 5,000 wooled shawls, from $2 to $6 each, from $3 to $10 each. COLUMBIAN HALL, 84 and 86 Broad-st.
A. & E. M. TOWLE & CO.

CARD.—THE UNDERSIGNED BEG LEAVE TO announce to the ladies of New-York and adjacent, that their stock of furs for the Fall and Winter is now nearly complete, and comprises a very large variety of Sable, Mink, Marten, Stone Marten, Genuine Sable, Fitch, Chinchilla, &c., and manufactured into Sacks, Capes, Cloaks, Victorines, &c., by the most expert workmen, and warranted to be of the best quality, and at the lowest prices. A call is respectfully solicited. ARCHER & MARTIN, (Successors to W. A. Archer,) No. 178 Greenwich-st.

"NIP AND TUCK," BUT KNOW AHEAD—THE selection of a hat, KNOX is the place to get it. He has no competitor this Fall; but we repeat, you must see his goods to be help for it; nearly all new, elegant hats for gentlemen of the best and most fashionable taste in town; and accordingly his stores at No. 128 Fulton-st. and under the Astor House, in Broadway, are thronged every day with upper customers. On election day, it is said, more gentlemen visited the stores for the purpose where the polls were held; the crowd was so great.

PERHAM'S ETHIOPIAN TROUPE ARE THE BEST delineators of negro character that we have in New-York. They display a great variety of talent, and make their hearers laugh at their ludicrous representations of those, now called Negro Minstrels. Their performance of Ethiopia is the funniest and most daring performance we ever witnessed. Their Opera Troupe is good, nightly entertainer the people by the numerous dances, comic songs, &c.

MELODIONS—WONDERFUL IMPROVEMENTS.—The power, brilliancy and richness of tone and elasticity of touch of S. D. & H. W. SMITH'S celebrated Melodeons place them far in advance of any other works of this class of instruments. They are tuned in the equal temperament and are admirably adapted to the use of teachers, choirs or lodge rooms.

Sold, wholesale and retail, at prices which defy competition. HORACE WATERS, Sole Agent, No. 333 Broadway.

THE HOLIDAYS ARE COMING ON, AND MR. RUSSELL is prepared to meet the demand of the season in an hand with his extensive stock of comfortable, useful garments, gloves, shirts, collars, cravats, scarfs, ties, and every article in gent's furnishing goods. His motto is One Price only.

INDIA-RUBBER GLOVES AND MITTENS, FOR use in cold and wet weather; also, Ladies' Kind Gloves, and Horsehair Gloves and Mitts—a certain cure for rough and chapped hands—for sale at all Rubber stores, and in the trade only at No. 50 John-st., up stairs.

"I'LL ENTERTAIN A SQUIB OR TWO OF TALLEYRAND"—So says Richard III. Where can one do so with one, Three, Six, the two, Sixpence clothing at SMITH BROTHERS', No. 128 Fulton-st., equal to antiquity in color, and thirty per cent cheaper.

$200,000 WORTH OF SUPERB CARPETS, 37½ PER cent less than Broadway prices! At the great American Rag Store, No. 97 Bowery, English, Velvet, Ingrain, Brussels, Tapestry, Rag carpets with; Matting, Oil cloth, Window Blinds at 25, 50, and 75 per yard.

JAMES LITTLE & CO., MERCHANT TAILORS, No. 441 Broadway, near Grand-st., have constantly on hand a large assortment of Ready-made Clothing, which they are selling at great sacrifice. Give us a call before purchasing.

A WORD TO THE WISE IS SUFFICIENT.—NOW is the time to buy one of BALLARD'S PATENT PARLOR STOVES, No. 70 Chatham, and corner of Chatham and Pearl-sts.

CLOTHING.—FASHIONABLE CLOTHING AT THE lowest cash prices, and warranted to give satisfaction, can be had at the establishment of DEVLIN, COOLEY & CO., No. 141 Fulton, and No. 40 Ann-st.

☞ ADIR THOMAS, SOLOMON B. FOSTER, JOSEPH A. HOVLAND, EDWIN MOODY, agent of the Hudson and Worcester Railroad, and ALEXANDER HAMMERSLAY, (colored,) were committed Tuesday afternoon at Worcester, on the complaint of the City Marshal, on a charge of riot, and on account of ADA O. BUTMAN, by which riot and assault the life of Mr. BUTMAN was put in imminent peril. They were taken before the Police Court, and ordered to recognize with sureties of $1,000 each, for their appearance before that Court on Wednesday, Nov. 15, for examination. All but O. S. FOSTER furnished bail, and he declined to recognize the authority of any court but the Court of Heaven. The Court informed him that he had jurisdiction over the offence committed in the city, and upon his refusing to furnish bail, ordered him to be committed to the county jail to await his examination, and he was committed. Mr. FOSTER, in order to carry out the great principle of nonresistance, refused to walk after his arrest, and the officers were obliged to carry him in and out of court.

☞ At the late meeting of the Entomological Society, Mr. WESTWOOD said, that some seeds, recently received from the West coast of America, had been presented to him by Sir W. HOOKER, being remarkable for the power of jumping about. This motion, it was discovered, was due to the presence of an insect larva enclosed in each. He found an Ichneumon among the seeds, probably the parasite of the Mexican larva; but he would make a further communication when he had made an examination. The President said, KIRBY and SPENCE had mentioned a similar instance of motion communicated to seeds by larvæ of some of the Bruchidæ,—and Mr. CURTIS stated that he had verified their statement.

SPECIAL NOTICES

☞ Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness, and Soreness of the Chest—are promptly relieved by Dr. MCLINTOCK'S COLD AND COUGH MIXTURE. One teaspoonful will relieve cold or cough. Price, only 25 cents. A CUSHMAN & CO., No. 123 Fulton-st., Proprietors, and also by BURTON, 56, No. 197 Broadway, corner of Canal-st., and Druggists generally. For settled consumption or bronchitic bleeding of the lungs, night sweats, &c., use Dr. MCCLINTOCK'S PECTORAL SYRUP. Sold as above. Price, $1, in pint bottles.

☞ Fruit and Ornamental Trees and Plants.—Including everything necessary to the Garden, Greenhouse, Nursery and Orchard, with all the recent introductions, at very low rates. Descriptive price Catalogues with Carriage paid to New-York. Ornamental and other plants, fine fruit, any part of the country. Address R. M. WATSON, Old Colony Nurseries, Plymouth, Mass.

☞ Redding's Russia Salve—25 Cents a Box.—A Burn, scarcely of 10 years' continuance, cured and spoony cures for burns, scalds, boils, and all external injuries; recommended by physicians. Sold by all druggists in the United States. A. B. & D. SANDS, C. W. CLOVERNOR & CO., C. H. RING, New-York; and WM. E. KIESER, Philadelphia. REDDING & CO., Boston.

☞ The Parthenon Circulating Library—Containing over 4,000 volumes of Choice Books, and to which will now be added, in a, DAVIS' Bookstore, No. 4,000 Broadway, corner of 10th-st.

TERMS—$3 a year; $1 six months; Catalogues, 12½ cents.

☞ Large and Superior Trees, &c.—WM. R. PRINCE & CO., Flushing, can supply extra large Trees of every kind, for immediate fruit-bearing or ornament. Catalogues at No. 113 Chambers-st.

☞ Health, Life and Vigor Restored.—Dr. MORSE'S INVIGORATING CORDIAL will relieve with wonderful rapidity, every disorder incident to the digestive apparatus; restore the appetite, remove the greatest nervous debility, lassitude, lowness of spirits, sleeplessness, hypochondriasis, &c. It invigorates the system, restores the natural complexion, imparts to the attenuated frame a healthy robust appearance, allays irritation, calms the fluttered pulsations, builds up the original constitution, and is recommended by the Medical Faculty, in cases where it is prescribed, to be the most powerful, safe, and pleasant cordial ever offered to the public. Prepared only by the proprietor, DR. MORSE, 167 Greenwich-st., N. Y. Sold by all druggists.

☞ Veterans of the War of 1812.—An adjourned meeting of the Corps of "The Veterans," on FRIDAY the 17th inst., at 7½ o'clock P. M., Delmonico's, 502 Broadway. Officers of Veterans of 1812, are invited to meet with us.

By order, A. W. JONES, Major Commanding.
A. DIXEY, Jr., Adjutant.

☞ Mr. Newton, the distinguished Phrenologist, will deliver a Lecture at the Brooklyn Institute, for the Franklin Debating Association on FRIDAY EVENING, Nov. 17, 1854. Subject—The Influence of Science and Literature on the Development of the Intellect. Commencing at 7½ o'clock. Admission 15 cents.

☞ Opera Cellars, Berthes, Scarfs, Sleeves and Collars, in Real Point, Honiton, Guipure and Maltese, Chemisettes and Sleeves, in sets, in great variety, and at less than usual prices.
PETER ROBERTS & CO., No. 375 Broadway.

☞ City Missions.—A meeting in behalf of the New-York City Tract Society, every Sunday, will be held THIS EVENING in the Reformed Presbyterian Church in Waverly-place, West of 6th-av. Addresses by Missionaries and others. Exercises to commence at 7½ o'clock.

☞ Embroidered Handkerchiefs.—Scarcely worn, from 25 cents upwards. Also, Sleeves, Sets, Stitched and Tucks, Bodices, and an assortment of Morning Handkerchiefs, just received by PETER ROBERTS & CO., No. 375 Broadway.

☞ Embroideries.—Consisting of rich Paris work, Capes, Chemisettes and Collars. Also Sets and Media Trimmings, a full assortment, at PETER ROBERTS & CO.'S No. 375 Broadway.

☞ Black Gutapeh Lace.—Two inches all widths, and of superior quality, just received by PETER ROBERTS & CO., No. 375 Broadway.

☞ [illegible]—At Home Concert, by Mrs. [illegible], WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY EVENING, at 8 o'clock.

PERSONAL.

INFORMATION WANTED—Of JAMES HUGGINS, who arrived in this country from Liverpool in the year [illegible], and lived at No. 20 Pearl-st., New-York. Any person giving information respecting the above, will be rewarded by the same inquirer.
MARY HUGGINS,
[illegible], Putnam County, New-York.

A YOUNG MAN—Engaged in a [illegible] business, desires to correspond with a young lady, with a view to matrimony, if mutual affection, with a congenial disposition, and suitable education, shall appear. Address [illegible], Box 3, Sandy Hill, Conn.

WANTED.

SITUATION WANTED—By two young women, sisters, to do some sewing, or assist in the nursery; or would take charge of a child or children, and do some sewing. Call at No. 84 Prince-st., for two days.

SITUATION WANTED—By a respectable young woman, to do chamber work and plain sewing, or assist in washing and ironing, or to do general housework in a small genteel family. Has lived for six years in one place. Has the best of City references. Can be seen for two days at No. 377 Broadway, between 13th and 14th-sts., in the upholsterer's store.

SITUATION WANTED—By a very capable young woman, to do the cooking, washing and ironing, or to do the housework of a small family; is a very good cook, and a first-rate laundress. Has excellent references, and will be found competent in her business. No objection to go any distance in the country. Call at the Mark-lane Post Office, No. 76 Mark-st., old No. 94.

SITUATION WANTED—By a respectable young girl, as chambermaid and waiter in a private family. Has no objection to the care of children. Is a good plain sewer, and has the best of City references from her last place. Call at No. 57 13th-st., between the 5th and 6th-avs. Can be seen for two days.

SITUATION WANTED—By a steady, respectable German to cook, wash and iron. Can do all kinds of nursery baking. Can give three years' City references. Will be found careful and willing to do her work. Call at No. 86 Prince-st., for two days.

SITUATION WANTED—By a young woman, to do nursework, or to take care of children. Has the best of City references from her last place. Call at No. 69 10th-st., between the 5th and 6th-avs., 2d floor, back room.

SITUATIONS WANTED—In City or country, by three very experienced girls with good City references; one to cook and do washing and ironing, or do the housework of a private family; the other to nurse and sew, or act as chamber maid and seamstress. Call at No. 73 6th-av., in the bookstore.

SITUATION WANTED—By a very experienced Cook, with good City references, to nurse and sew, or act in a private family. Can make children's clothes, and do plain sewing in the nearest manner; understands her business thoroughly, and would act as housekeeper if required. Call at No. 73 6th-av., in the bookstore.

SITUATIONS WANTED—As a first-class laundress, or as chambermaid and dressmaker, in a private family, by a very experienced girl, with good City references; and as a good cook and to wash and iron by another. Call at No. 73 6th-av., in the bookstore.

SITUATIONS WANTED—In the City or country, by two very experienced girls, with good City references; one to do good cook and to wash and iron in a private family; the other as chambermaid and waiter, or as waiter. Call at No. 73 6th-av., in the bookstore.

AUTHORS—LAWYERS—MERCHANTS, &c.—A well-educated gentleman, accustomed to have the private secretary and Phonographic amanuensis in the office of obtaining such a situation at present. He could render valuable assistance to an author or compiler, or as correspondent clerk in a mercantile establishment. Address PHONOGRAPHY, Daily Times office.

HOUSE OF REFUGE.—A suitable person is wanted for one of the Keepers, and take charge of a Farm in connection with the new House of Refuge on Randall's Island. Applications with references will be received by either of the undersigned, viz.:
ISRAEL THORNDIKE, No. 37 Pearl-st.
LINUS W. STEVENS, No. 15 Chatham-st.
GEO. F. HUSSEY, No. 128 Hours-st.

EDUCATION.—A well educated Classical scholar of mature years, who has had the entire charge of an extensive Classical School, and is a thorough Classical and English teacher, wishes an engagement as Teacher of a Classical School, or Assistant in a respectable Seminary. Address M. R., Box No. 169 Middletown, Conn.

COACHMAN—Wanted by a young unmarried Protestant, a situation as coachman or waiter in a private family. Can bring the highest testimonial of character of some of the first families of the City. Communications addressed SAMUEL NELSON, No. 11 West 21st-st., the residence of his present employer, will meet with prompt attention.

AN AMERICAN LADY wishes to meet with a particular [illegible] a first-class boarding house or hotel, who would wish to engage her services as the Wife or as family housekeeper to some one of either of the above places. Has no objections to a private family. For further particulars address Mrs. H. R. at this office.

AN AMERICAN OR ENGLISH PROTESTANT WOMAN WANTED—To take charge of an infant. None but those who have the best of references need apply at No. 68 6th-av., from 9 to 11 o'clock A. M.

MUSIC SCHOLARS.—A lady, from on Bowling Green Heights, would like to give lessons on the Piano-Forte to a few young people at her residence. Good references required. Address M. P., at this office, or through the Brooklyn Post-Office.

GOVERNESS.—A lady recently arrived from Europe is desirous of finding a situation as governess in a family or to give lessons out in a school or to teach a school. Has been used to teaching in a school and to teaching her own children. Is perfectly competent to teach French, Spanish, music and singing. Speaks English and German, and can produce valuable references. Apply to MORTIMER LIVINGSTON, No. 32 Broadway.

GOVERNESS.—A middle-aged lady is desirous of a situation in a family where the children are young, to under-take the management and education of them; the undersigned Brooklyn ladies can and would render her useful in needlework and superintendence of the house-keeping. Address L. E. R., Brooklyn Post-Office.

EVENING EMPLOYMENT WANTED.—A young man, whether to employ his evenings usefully, offers his services, and can do copying of legal and other papers, or to write up or close a set of books by double entry. Address R., office of this paper.

FOUR INDUSTRIOUS GIRLS—Lately landed, want situations to have their mother. Address, They will be content with $1 a month, and have not afraid to work in the City or country. Call at No. 73 6th-av., in the bookstore.

CLERK.—A young man, 19 years old, of good moral character, with references, wants a situation as clerk with an hot ced grocery or firm in a wholesale or retail store. Address J. H. P., Chatham-square Post-Office.

LEATHER STITCHERS WANTED.—Five or four persons who understand stitching on leather with needles. None others need apply. Apply at No. 41 Warren-st., up stairs.

TO TAILORS.—SITUATION WANTED—By a young man (American) as salesman in some retail establishment. Is the best of references given for honesty and sobriety. Is a practical tailor. Address, for 6 days, B. P., No. 165 6th-av.

THE CRY IS STILL THEY COME.—C. MALONE Offers, No. 14 Hill-avenue and No. 143 Bowery, are now crowded beyond all precedent; 1,000 servants are now on hand. Will anybody come and take them away? The majority of these girls are good cooks, well recommended, and will be satisfied with moderate wages in the City or country. Alone men and boys are also hand suitable for any respectable employment.

AMERICAN, ENGLISH, GERMAN, IRISH, AND SCOTCH GIRLS, with good characters, nurses, cooks, waiters and sewers, may be engaged at No. 4 East Broadway, corner of Chatham square.

SERVANTS.—Employers supplied free of charge, with the very best of servants, at the office No. 387 Houston-st., two blocks east of Broadway. Servants can likewise obtain good situations. J. S. SCUDDER.

CHRISTIAN HOME FOR FEMALE SERVANTS.—No. 416 6th-av., corner of 30th-st.—Servants of good character, of all nations, can always find a home and situation, and in every country supplied from this institution. Servants wanted.—Two Protestant cooks in city.

FARO PLAYING CARDS.

FARO PLAYING CARDS—Very old and well-used Faro, with all the various other tricks of the trade, made by SAM. HART & CO., for sale to the trade and club houses at their store, No. 1 Barclay-st., opposite Astor House.

TO THE PUBLIC—In accordance with special [illegible] appeared with our counsel (Mr. Hagar,) before Justice Osborne, on the 14th inst., to show cause against prefferred against us by George M. Chapman, and see what ourselves prepared for a thorough examination of the case. Mr. Chapman was present with the counsel employed by him (Mr. Phillips,) and we asked for an adjournment, on the ground that our counsel had not sufficient time to examine the matters complained of, and also because he had to go out of town somewhere as a witness in a suit, and also for the reason that some of the books and papers which he refers to in his affidavit (and which our counsel had required him to produce on the examination,) were out of the City.

The respective counsel not being able to agree upon the adjournment, (our counsel having been instructed by us to consent to no delays in the matter,) Justice Osborne stated (1st) in consideration of the complaint made by Chapman, and filed various charges, and was very verbose in his statements, (having was drawn by Chapman himself, without any legal advice, as he himself admitted in Court,) he should support that Mr. Chapman exactly some one of the charges distinctly, for our examination, and thus expedite the unnecessary loss of time, and facilitate the examination; and in order to enable this to be done, and to accommodate Chapman, he would let the case stand over until next Saturday week, when he (Mr. Chapman) and his counsel would be ready and competent to meet all the charges contained in the affidavit.

We simply request a suspension of public opinion upon the charges preferred against us until we can have an opportunity (which we moved and Justice Osborne) to be satisfied that we can show that the whole proceeding is an attempt to secure the payment of a claim which the complainant will not place by investigation in a civil Court, where his mouth as well as ours would be stopped. In this criminal proceeding Mr. Chapman can testify, and we cannot.
HENRY J. IBBOTSON,
SAMUEL F. IBBOTSON.

NEW-YORK CITY, Nov. 16, 1854.

P. S.—I have stated that Mr. Chapman said a short time before he commenced these proceedings, that if he should become poor, he would include me in his affidavit as a party, (even although I was innocent,) in order to cut me off from being a witness for my brother. S. F. IBBOTSON.

NO PREPARATION now extant invented can prevent GOURAUD'S ITALIAN MEDICATED SOAP from curing the most obstinate cases of tetter, flesworm, chapped hands, chilblains, sore lips, scurvy, scaly eruptions, containing mineral astringent, utterly intolerable to the most tender skin, and by their peculiar action, making the skin soft, smooth, and healthy. GOURAUD'S POUDRE SUBTILE removes hair from any part of the body. Lotion Lait Virginal, Hair Dye and Restorative at the old place, No. 67 Walker-st., first store from Broadway. Call-boxes, No. 48 South-st., Philadelphia.

BANKS SOMETIMES EXPLODE—Rocks fall Dead Horses and Forwards, LIFE AND BANK LOCKS work never known to fail or [illegible] Bank Locks, and Safes constantly on hand at the Bank of Wright's Safe Co., No. 110 Pearl-st., Hanover-st., New-York. T. C. HOBBS, Agent.

SAFE FOR SALE.—One of Herring's fire proof safes. Size nearly new, ornamented with paint, inside work and heavily mounted with silver, cost $1,000 when new. Can be bought cheap. MARION, No. 81 John-st.

NOTICE.—The [illegible] will be closed on Friday [illegible] the time be removed to earlier, it will be [illegible] on Monday next, to delay expenses.

BOARDING.

BOARDING.—And a parlor and bedroom [illegible] the parlor floor front. Also, a parlor and two bedrooms with closets adjoining, on the 2d floor, and rooms for single gentlemen, 21 No. 24 East 22d-st.

BOARDING.—A few families and single gentlemen can be accommodated on the Hoboken and Williamsburgh Ferries, midway between Hoboken and Wallabout Ferries. EDWIN B. VALE.

BOARDING.—A gentleman and lady, or two single gentlemen, can be accommodated with board and pleasant rooms, at No. 72 3d-av.

BOARDING.—Two or three gentlemen can be accommodated with a pleasant room, good board, and a comfortable home, by applying at No. 14 Henry-st.

BOARDING.—A few single gentlemen or ladies, or gentleman and wife, can be accommodated with Board in a private family, by applying at No. 108 West 18th-st., near 6th-av.

BOARD IN BROOKLYN.—One large furnished parlor room, with fireplace, and bath [illegible], on third floor, will be let with board. Location between Wall-st. and South Ferries. Apply at No. 289 Hicks-st., near Doughtonst.

BOARD IN BROOKLYN.—Between the South and Wall-st. Ferries, a room and bedroom on 2d story, front. Also two rooms on 3d story. References exchanged. Apply at No. 56 State-st., near Henry.

BOARD IN BROOKLYN.—A gentleman and wife, or two or three single gentlemen, can find board with pleasant rooms in a private family, near Wall-st. Ferry. Address A., Times office.

BOARD ON BROOKLYN HEIGHTS.—A family wishing to board a few gentlemen, can find board with pleasant rooms, at No. 3 Willow-st.

SUPERIOR ROOMS TO LET.—In a private family, with or without breakfast and dinner on Sundays, if desired; also, a few gentlemen to board. Frenchman or English family preferred, as I speak both languages fluently. Address L. E. R., Brooklyn Post-Office.

TWO SINGLE GENTLEMEN.—Of quiet habits, can be accommodated with board on Sundays, in a house situated in the upper part of the City, consisting of a private family, having few or no other boarders, with fruit, fast and tea and dinner on Sunday. Terms not to exceed $10 per week. No boarding house keepers need apply. Address MARLEY, at this Office.

ROOMS WITH PARTIAL BOARD—At No. 27 Bond-st., large and small, in suites or separately, furnished or unfurnished, with hot, cold and shower baths.

FURNISHED ROOMS—May be obtained in suites or separately, with partial board if desired, in a private family, residing at No. 320 West 14th-st. References required.

FURNISHED ROOMS—At No. 6 Bond-st., with all the modern improvements, for single gentlemen, with partial board, if required.

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR A BOARDING HOUSE?—Persons of the highest respectability, who are decidedly anxious that there is another way of finding such, are now satisfactorily, as through this office. Boarders politely directed, free of charge, to any part of this City and Brooklyn, and we can give the great majority of them another boarding and lodging-place, as there are many such. Give us your confidence and rely upon my statements. Office, Clinton Hall, corner 8th-st. and Lafayette-place.

DRY GOODS.

CLOAKS! CLOAKS!! CLOAKS!!!
GEORGE BULPIN,
No. 361 Broadway,

Respectfully invites the attention of ladies to his immense assortments for the present season, comprising an assortment of

TEN THOUSAND CLOAKS,

at the following extraordinary prices:

Twenty-five hundred superb cloth silk lined Cloaks at.....$12
Fifteen hundred superb cloth silk lined Cloaks, at.....$14
Eight hundred superb cloth silk lined Cloaks, at.....$16
One thousand very rich cloth silk lined Cloaks, at.....$18
Twelve hundred superb Lyons velvet Cloaks, at.....$20
One thousand superb Lyons velvet Cloaks, at.....$22
Four hundred superb Lyons velvet Cloaks, at.....$24
Five hundred splendid satin Cloaks, at.....$25
Three hundred extra superfine silk Cloaks, at.....$30
Three hundred superb brocade silk Cloaks, at.....$35
And an endless profusion of cloth, Talma, &c.....$8 and $9

The subscriber deems further comment unnecessary. Suffice it to say, the high character of the goods on sale at his establishment is already well known, and he would merely add in conclusion, that the above will be found on inspection to be the richest, best, and cheapest Cloaks ever seen in America.
GEORGE BULPIN.
Paris Mantilla Emporium, No. 361 Broadway.

CLOSING BUSINESS.
DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP.
SELLING OFF, WITHOUT REGARD TO COST.
Commencing MONDAY, Nov. 13,
HEARE, CLAPP & CO.,
No. 361 Grand-st.

In closing the business of this concern, Messrs. H. C. & Co. will, on the 13th and 14th of November, close their store for the purpose of marking down their entire stock of seasonable goods, which will be offered, without reserve, to cost or consignment. Their object is to dispose of the goods

$20,000 Worth of Goods to be disposed of in 60 days, consisting of

Rich Silks, Shawls, Velvets, Cashmeres, Merinoes, Cashmeres, Poplins, Bombazines, Cotton Cloths, Delaines, &c.
An extensive assortment of Ladies' Clothing in all colors, Cloths, Cassimeres, Satinets and Vestings.
Linen Table and Diaper Cloths, Napkins and Toweling, Shirting Linens, Sheetings, Linen Sheetings, British German and Domestic
Hosiery, Gloves, &c.

In the commencement of the dissolution of this firm, the usual protection, so extensively displayed by others, of having a few goods to sell at cost, will be dispensed with. Our intention, will be truthfully contrasted by our prices to and after the commencement of our sales.

MONDAY, Nov. 13, 1854.
HEARE, CLAPP & CO., No. 361 Grand-st.,
Between Bridge and Allen-sts.

MRS. VAN HOUTEN,
GENTLEMEN'S LINEN,
No. 42 Nassau-st., New-York.
Premiums have been awarded by the Crystal Palace and American Institute.

GREAT REDUCTION IN THE PRICES OF GENTLEMEN'S DRESS CLOTHS, CASSIMERES AND VESTINGS.—Offering his Cloaks and Hosiery much below former prices. The stock embraces every variety of Cloth, Satin and Velvet Cloaks, Mantillas and Talmas recently imported and manufactured in the most fashionable styles of the season. Also, a large stock of Broche Long and Square Shawls recently purchased at the recent peremptory Auction sales, and every description of Wool Shawls, which will be offered at the lowest prices. Ladies' Cloth Cloaks of the latest fashion open from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M. Admission free. GOSPEL & CO., 347 Broadway, New-York.

MAGNETIC POWDERS.

Having in charge
Pills on my left hand while we sleep;
Are the Powders
Pills on the right hand—that sweet.
Pills of all diseases—that cheat.

LEROY'S MAGNETIC POWDERS ARE PILLS for [illegible] Diseases, Assets and Pains are sold, Nationally and [illegible] at the Depot, 334 Broadway.

CHEAP! CHEAP! CHEAP!—BAL. GOODS [illegible] HENRY A. COSLER. For sale by all the Hosiery Jobbers.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

SAWYER AND WISCOTT.
THE DISCUSSION
ON THE DOCTRINE OF EVERLASTING MISERY.

Recently held by the above gentlemen at the Tabernacle, and which, from the position and talents of the disputants, attracted much attention, is now published complete in one large volume. Price 75 cents. For sale by all booksellers.
BUNCE & BROTHER, No. 134 Nassau-st.

"Wet eyes are better critics than cold words."—Sir Walter Scott.

4,000 SOLD IN TEN DAYS.
GREAT SUCCESS!
THE NEWSBOY,
THIRD EDITION NOW READY.
ADDITIONAL NOTICES OF LEADING PAPERS.
From the Albany Express.

Some but
A WOMAN WITH WOMANLY INSTINCTS
could spread such delicate pictures on a canvas. The simple language of Nature, which results in every page of these little fascinating books, which are all rather than discovered, will continue the reader that "The Newsboy" is
FROM THE PEN OF A WOMAN.
From the New-York Day Book.

The story is one of great tenderness and feeling, and will appeal to the heart by its vivid pictures of deep, heart-felt sympathies. From the rude, rough exterior of the Newsboy, we find a fountain of natural truths, almost as PIQUANT AS THE PROVERBS OF SANCHO PANZA.
From the New-York National Democrat.

There is about the book a
PATHOS AND REALITY OF HOPE AND FEAR, joy and sorrow, rarely met with in the world of romance.
From the Rochester Daily Union.

In his pictures of the Newsboy, with undimmed ray through an atmosphere clouded and dark with vice, we are involuntarily reminded of the TOUCHING WORD-PAINTING OF DICKENS.

Indeed, if the name of Dickens was written under the title, his reputation would be increased by the association.
From the Boston Bee.

The book is no less instructive than entertaining. It is A HISTORY, A BIOGRAPHY, AND YET A NOVEL. It deals in facts stranger than fiction, and fiction as real as fact.
From the Portland Transcript.

Its mission is to INCREASE OUR FAITH IN HUMANITY, and to show that there is a native goodness in the human heart which contains within the wretchedness only.
From the Boston Times Flag.

This powerfully written novel is creating a marked sensation. The narrative is vigorous and exciting and the plot skillfully managed. The unknown author draws largely from real life, and delineates
LIVING, BREATHING CHARACTERS, which are readily recognized.
From the New-York Herald.

It is characterized, by a truthfulness, a tenderness of sympathy, and a high moral purpose, which APPEAL IMMEDIATELY TO THE HEART of the reader, and a deep interest is there in this delineation of lowly virtues, which renders it as attractive as the most brilliant romance.
From Porter's Spirit of Times.

"BOB" WILL DO TO GO WITH "GERTY"
of the Lyceum, and we know many thousands who have been delighted with that week should precisely this one forthwith.
From the Detroit Tribune.

It is a book over which
WET EYES ARE BETTER CRITICS THAN COLD WORDS.

Yet its story on the stage would bring the tribute to tears and silence the faint under criticism.
From the Cincinnati (Ohio) Bazaar.

The reader is captured by the first chapter, and led a willing captive to the end of the book.

"HAVE YOU READ THE NEWSBOY?"

is a question passing from month to month in the Eastern circles.

THE NEWSBOY is elegantly got up with illustrations, and makes a large line of 12 mo. paper. Price, $1 25.

J. C. DERBY, Publisher,
No. 119 Nassau-st., New-York.

And for sale by Booksellers and News Agents everywhere.

Single copies sent by mail, post paid, on receipt of price.

We shall publish, in December,
THE LIFE OF HORACE GREELEY,
Editor of the New-York Tribune,
BY J. PARTON.
Duodecimo, 480 pp. Illustrated. Price $1 25.

Neither with the conception nor the composition of this book has Mr. GREELEY had anything to do. The author says in his preface: "I undertook the task, in the first place, because I liked the man—because I had taken an interest in his career. Gradually I thought the story of his life enough to be told." It is further stated in the preface, that the publishers believe, with perfect truth, that "nothing has been left out which ought to be left out, and not a single one." The book, says the author, "is as true as I could make it."

In the preparation of this work, the author visited every place at which he has been resident, and compiled the account of his early life, which is the most interesting part of the story, from the narratives of his relatives, schoolfellows, fellow-apprentices, fellow-journeymen, and others.

A leading object of the work was to show how HORACE GREELEY came to be the man he is; the history is given of the origin of his opinions, political and religious, and an accurate account is given of the material development of his mind in succeed circumstances, and with the most restricted means. Mr. GREELEY's arrival in New-York, and his early struggles here, are circumstantially narrated. His first job in life, his connection with the establishment of the first cheap daily paper, and the author has seized the opportunity to give, for the first time, a history of the idea, and of its origination. The subsequent chapters present, in more or less of detail, HORACE GREELEY as an Editor, Poet, Author, and Public Speaker—HORACE GREELEY in Congress, Abroad, Public Lectures, in Broadway, at Church, at Home, in his Family. One chapter contains a collection of his best Editorial Reputations; another, of his Practical Suggestions; another, of Sketches of the Days of Old Times; an account of the Tribune Office, by day and night.

In a word, the publishers believe that the "Life of Horace Greeley" will be one of the most interesting, complete, and reliable Biographies that has ever appeared.
GEORGE BARNARD & BROTHERS,
No. 13 Park-row, New-York.

HOLD YOUR HORSES!
WE ARE COMING.
THE ANNUAL GRAND MAMMOTH HOLIDAY
PICTORIAL PEGASUNIM
Will be ready on the 20th of November.

This Pictorial will be double the size of the Weekly, and contain many NEW and ORIGINAL
COMIC ILLUSTRATIONS, HITS AT THE TIMES,
engraved for it by the best artists in America. It will contain some FUN, WIT, SATIRE, MIRTH and COMICALITIES, that will shock all who think not proper to laugh.

It will be printed on a superior paper, made expressly for the purpose.

ALL THE REGULARS
that have appeared for the last six months, with many new ones, and answers thereto, will be quoted in its pages, forming a very interesting feature.
YOUNG FOLKS.

As a laughter-provoker, it will be unequaled. Try it. Price 6 cents.
W. H. LEVISON,
No. 14 Spruce-st.

Trade supplied by ROSS, JONES & TOUSEY, No. 121 Nassau-st. EXCLUSIVE AGENTS for the Publisher. Twenty copies by mail for $1.

THE HISTORY OF LOUISIANA.
THE HISTORY OF THE DAY.
THE HISTORY OF LOUISIANA.
SPANISH DOMINATION.
By CHARLES GAYARRE. 8vo. Cloth, $2 50.
On Saturday, Nov. 18,
YOU HAVE HEARD OF THEM. Being Sketches of Statesmen and Politicians, Painters, Composers, Inventors, Scientists and Novelists, Authors and Authoresses, by G. W. Bell, author of "Rural Hours," Horace Vernet and Emile Grief. 12mo., cloth. Price $1.

Among them are: Guizot, Lady Blessington, Henry Clay, Clarendon, Bayard Taylor, Edwin Landseer, Emile Grief, Sir Roland Hill, Sir Robert Peel, Thomas Moore, Horace Vernet, Rossini, Louis Mentor, Thomas Moore, Jenny Lind, Benjamin Rydes, Lablache, Isaac Chatterton Anderson, Gaetano Donizetti, Lady Bulwer, Emanuel Geibel, Thomas Hood, Victor, the Hero Player, Carlotta Grief, Surgeon Lawrence, Sir Charles Napier, Louis Jenin, Miss Cushman, Carolus Ary Scheffer, &c., &c.

FOR SALE WHEN, WHERE, AND HOW.
SOUTHWARD HO! A SPELL OF SUNSHINE. By WM. GILMORE SIMMS. Price, cloth, $1 25.
J. S. REDFIELD, Nos. 110 and 112 Nassau-st.

THE WIDE, WIDE WORLD.
NEW ONE VOLUME EDITION.

G. P. PUTNAM & CO. announce the publication of a new edition (the 25th thousand) of this popular tale, the two volumes complete in one vol., 12mo., with several very elegant illustrations, and the price reduced to $1 25.

EXTRACTS FROM OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.
From the London Athenæum.

The authoress writes with quietness and clearness. Her power of discriminating and presenting character is great, and on one of chapter illustrations the whole work.

The most valuable work of the kind I have ever read. It is capable of doing more good than any book, other than the Bible. It is more valuable than Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, because it is free from doctrinal and religious matters, and by its home scenes, and the recollections which it excites, appeals more strongly to our sympathies. Every Sunday school ought to be furnished with a copy, and every child and every parent should read and reread it.
From the New-York Recorder.

This is a tale depending for its interest on lively and truthful pictures of domestic and country life. Its portraiture of character is striking and true to nature, and the whole work is pervaded by a healthy religious and moral tone.
G. P. PUTNAM & CO.,
No. 10 Park-place.

THE GREAT WORK OF THE AGE.—DR. TOMLIN'S Gaseous Inquiry Anthropos has thrown a bombshell into the camp of materialists. The public has just demanded a third edition of his startling work, entitled, "The Mysteries of Anthropos, and the Wonders of Life." He demonstrates, by the laws of numerical logic, by a process of reasoning, conclusive that he is perfectly irrefutable. The work is clear and concise in its deductions, and gives ample illustration of the power, wisdom, and the necessary of nature, and of all the various branches of scientific research are treated, and all the various branches of scientific research are treated. The volume is beautifully illustrated and superbly bound. It may be obtained of booksellers generally, or of the author, by inclosing the price, or by the publisher, Mr. Gilbert, 114 Nassau-st., N. Y. Price $1 25. Sent free of postage. Extract from all reviews of the work, on application, and on receipt of one letter-stamp. The publication of the work is to be made, wholesale and retail, by DEWITT & DAVENPORT, No. 160 Nassau-st.

SANTA CLAUSE.—KNOW-NOTHINGS, REFLECTORS, &c.—Just received, and for sale by J. REDFIELD, Nos. 110 and 112 Nassau-st.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

JUST PUBLISHED,
BARNES'S NEW SYSTEM OF ORTHOGRAPHY AND ANALYSIS. Price 12 cents.

This work is three-fold in scope, as the title indicates. It gives One a complete and thorough course of Orthography and Orthoepy, and also Elocution, Phonic Spelling, in which the various sounds of the letters and illustrated and exhibited.

In the second place, it gives the Spelling Structure, and is arranged so as to exhibit their MEANING in connection with their ORTHOGRAPHY and PRONUNCIATION. This is done by the introduction of words, or by a complete defining.

In the latter part of the book comes a complete Analysis of Everyday Use Language Words, by an EXPLANATION not only of the RADICAL Words, but also of the PREFIXES and SUFFIXES, and then a DEFINITION of the words which they help to constitute.

These, and other peculiar characteristics, it is believed, constitute this one of the most valuable books that can be placed in the hands of pupils, assisting a knowledge of their native language.

Although but just published, this book has been adopted with SANDERS' NEW READERS, by the Superintendent of Public Instruction of Illinois, for that entire State.

A copy of the book will be sent (pre-paid) by mail, together with a DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE of all our Publications, if desired, on receipt of one letter-stamp.
TYSON & PHINNEY,
No. 108 Fulton-st., New-York,
Publishers of the American Educational Series.

On Saturday, Nov. 18,
G. P. PUTNAM & CO. WILL PUBLISH
MISS FENIMORE COOPER'S NEW WORK,
THE RHYME AND REASON OF COUNTRY LIFE:
OR, SELECTIONS FROM FIELDS OLD AND NEW.
BY THE AUTHOR OF "RURAL HOURS," &C.

The boundless store
Of choicest lore which memory has treasured!
The warbling, woodland, the resounding shore,
The song of groves and murmurs of glades;
All that the genial ray of morning gilds,
And all that echoes to the song at even.

LIBRATTO.

Illustrated with 21 designs on wood, by C. H. Dopler, engraved by J. W. Orr. Beautifully printed in square octavo, uniform with "Irving's Sketch Book Illustrated," &c.

Cloth extra, $2 50; gilt extra, gilt edges, $3; morocco extra, $4.
G. P. PUTNAM & CO.,
No. 10 Park-place.

TICKNOR & FIELDS,
PUBLISH THIS DAY,

I.

NATURE IN DISEASE. Illustrated in various Discourses and Essays. To which are added Miscellaneous Writings chiefly on Medical Subjects. By JACOB BIGELOW, M. D. 1 vol. 12mo. Price $1 25.

CLOVERNOOK CHILDREN. A beautiful new Juvenile, handsomely illustrated. By ALICE CARY. Price 75 cents.

III.

MR. LONGFELLOW'S GOLDEN LEGEND. Illustrated. A superb volume, just out of the press, with designs by Birket Foster, and others. Morocco, $6; Muslin, $4.

From the Athenæum.

Who is Captain Canot?

There seems to be a doubt expressed by the London Athenæum as to the reality of such a man as
CAPTAIN CANOT,

and the same authority is inclined to believe that Brantz Mayer never existed.

CAPTAIN CANOT

still exists, and has recently received an appointment under the Imperial Government of France.

CAPTAIN CANOT'S
LIFE AND ADVENTURES,

which have attracted so much attention, are published in 1 volume, 12mo. Price, $1 25.
D. APPLETON & CO. Publishers,
Nos. 346 and 348 Broadway.

LONDON "WORLD OF FASHION."
FOR NOVEMBER,
AND ALL THE ENGLISH MAGAZINES
Now ready, by ARTHUR WILLMER, Agent, for CHARLES WILLMER'S Universal English, and Foreign Periodical and Newspaper Office, No. 139 Fulton-st., second floor.
CHARLES WILLMER,
New-York, Liverpool and Belfast.

AMUSEMENTS.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC—Union-square, 14th-st.—First appearance of Signor MARIO in Rossini's Opera IL BARBIERE DE SEVIGLIA.

ON FRIDAY, the 17th inst., will be presented, for the first time in this house,
IL BARBIERE DE SEVIGLIA.
Madame GRISI.
Signor MARIO.
Signor RADIALI.
Signor SUSINI, will appear.

In announcing Signor MARIO for the role of Count Almaviva, the management have the positive assurance of Mario if and his physicians that he will undoubtedly be able to appear.

The scenery designed, expressly for this Opera, painted by Signor Allegri.

The various salons for refreshments and refreshments are now open, and kept by Daniel B. Wagner, of Nos. 765 and 766 Broadway.

PRICES OF ADMISSION.
Ticket to Parquette and First Circle of Boxes.....$1
Second Circle of Boxes.....$1
Amphitheatre.....50 cents
Private seats in Boxes from.....$2 to $10
Tickets may be secured at the Box-Office on 14th-st., daily, from 9 o'clock A. M. till 5 o'clock P. M.; and also at WM. HALL & SONS, No. 128 Broadway; and at VAN NOR

NEW-YORK CITY.

POLITICAL.

BOARD OF COUNTY CANVASSERS.

Report of the Special Committee—The Board Has Its Powers—Supervisor Jones Gets Mad.

THIRD DAY—THURSDAY, NOV. 16.

The Supervisor of the Fifth Ward (HOYSRADT) presented himself to take the oath.

Supervisor WILLIAMSON moved, that so far as applicable to this Board, the rules of the Board of Aldermen be adopted for the government of the body. Carried.

PROTESTS.

Second Ward.—WILLIAM THOMPSON presented a protest against the election of RICHARD D. MARQUEZ, as Constable. The Board received the paper and laid on the table.

Nineteenth Ward.—WILLIAM T. JENNINGS presented against receiving the returns of the First District of the Nineteenth Ward on the vote for Alderman, on the ground that the Inspectors of that District were not qualified by law to act as such. Mr. JENNINGS was the Whig candidate for Alderman, running against ANSON HENRICK, (Fusion,) present incumbent.

Supervisor HENRICK objected to the reception of the protest, and moved that the protestant have leave to withdraw his paper.

Supervisor BLEVY moved to lay the protest on the table.

Supervisor HENRICK insisted upon his motion. He was not pleading on his own behalf, but insisted that the protest could not be received.

The motion to lay on the table prevailed.

A VOICE—Aye!

CHAIRMAN—Gentlemen in the lobby are not permitted to vote. [Laughter.]

THE ALLEGED FRAUDS—REPORT OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

Supervisor WILLIAMSON presented the following report:

The undersigned, Committee to whom was referred the proposed resolution and protest, would respectfully report:

That they have given the subject referred to them the most careful examination.

The first and most important question presented in the resolution is that which directs the Committee to inquire into the competency of the Board of County Canvassers to go behind the returns of the District Inspectors, or to investigate questions of fraud and illegality in relation to such spurious returns made by the District Inspectors. The law defining the duties of the Board of County Canvassers expressly provides that from the original statements of the District Inspectors, the Board shall proceed to estimate the votes of the County. Where any manifest error appears, it is further provided that the District Inspectors shall be called to correct such error. Beyond this, your Committee can find no authority in the statute to warrant the County Canvassers in investigating or scrutinizing the returns of the District Inspectors. The only remedy open for an aggrieved party is an application to the Courts of law. These tribunals have full power to investigate all questions of fraud, whether perpetrated by illegal voters or by corrupt Inspectors. While your Committee do not believe that the law absolutely restricts the Board of County Canvassers to ratify and endorse fraudulent returns, yet as there is no provision made by the act for taking evidence before this body, the Board of County Canvassers has no means of legally ascertaining the existence of fraud, and hence is bound to receive the sworn returns of the District Inspectors as a correct statement of the votes cast at the election they are required to canvass.

Your Committee find numerous precedents for throwing out returns by County Canvassers, but we also find that in every case where the matter was afterwards brought before the Courts, the returns thus rejected were affirmed in the candidates whose election was declared by such action on the part of the County Canvassers.

It is due to the protestants in this case, that your Committee should state that affidavits were laid before your Committee, alleging every variety of fraud, illegality and irregularity, as having been perpetrated at the late election, and in the canvass of votes by the Inspectors of said Election Districts. But, as your Committee are unable to find any authority or power to investigate these grave charges, we can only advise the parties to appeal to a tribunal competent to make the investigation.

In conclusion, your Committee would offer for adoption the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Board of County of Canvassers is not authorized by law to investigate questions of fraud and illegality, and are therefore bound to assume that the returns of the District Inspectors are correct, except as to such errors as the law provides for correcting.

Resolved, That the Committee be discharged from further consideration of the subject.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. J. WILLIAMSON, WM. TUCKER, ABRAM WAKEMAN, WM. CHAUNCEY, D. D. LORD, } Committee.

Supervisor CHAUNCEY—Mr. President, as I have signed that report, it is due to myself to put such an explanation upon it as I did in the Committee before I signed it. I do not mean, in signing that report to state that the Board of Canvassers are confined entirely to the returns made to them by the Board of Inspectors. I mean that if there are errors that are manifest on the face of the returns themselves, the Board have the right to act upon them. But where, to prove the existence of errors or frauds, there has to be a judicial investigation, and an examination of witnesses, we have no authority to proceed or act upon them. But where the errors or frauds are so manifest as to require nothing more than a statement of them before the Board, why, then I believe the Board has full power to take action upon them.

The PRESIDENT—Will the Board allow the Clerk to state that there has been a petition sent in, numerously signed, declaring that frauds have been committed at the late election, and asking that they, the petitioners, may be examined to prove their statements.

The following is a copy of the petition:

To the Hon. Board of Canvassers for the City and County of New-York:

We, the undersigned electors of the City of New-York, most respectfully represent that we believe there was much fraudulent voting committed during the election of Mayor, on the 7th inst. We beg leave to ask a careful scrutiny of the returns of election that may be laid before the Board; to give all due weight and consideration to the proofs of error and fraud that may be presented to you; to show the illegality of many election returns, and to throw out the votes of several election districts.

Dated Nov. 14, 1854.

Signed by J. G. BROWN & BROTHER, and 120 others.

The petition was laid on the table.

Supervisor MOTT said he should vote against the Report. He held that this was a question of jurisdiction; and argued that the Board possessed the right to inspect the manner in which the votes are returned.

Supervisor WILLIAMSON said the Committee had had presented to them a huge bundle of affidavits relating to frauds. These affidavits would undoubtedly be testimony, were the matter investigated, but obtaining evidence would then be problematical, and perhaps the entire twenty days might be employed in settling the differences of a single Ward. The affidavits had therefore been returned to the parties who presented them, and the Committee agreed to report as they had done.

The report was accepted by the following vote:

AYES—Messrs. Brown, Williamson, Hunt, Baird, Hutton, Howard, Woodward, Tucker, Veeder, Treat, Bergen, Stakman, Covert, Chauncey, May, Lord, Hardick—16.

NAY—None.

THE ELECTION CANVASS.

The Board then proceeded with the canvass of the City vote, by Wards; beginning with the First Ward.

There was some trouble with the Third District of the First Ward, where there was a disagreement of two votes in the vote for PHILLIPS, for District Attorney.

The Second Ward canvass was completed, and the Board adjourned until noon to-day.

Lee Marble.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

In an article which appeared in your paper this morning, on the subject of "Building Stones," the following statement is made:

"The Lee Stone is objectionable on account of the broad blue streaks which destroy its uniformity."

We are surprised at this statement, and conclude, in a spirit of charity, that it was made under an entire misapprehension of the facts of the case.

A small portion of the marble, obtained from the quarries at Lee, is blue mottled, but by far the larger portion is a pure white. Indeed, we venture to say that the quarry at Lee, from which it is proposed to furnish the marble for the new City Hall, will produce a larger proportion of pure white marble, than any other quarry in the United States. The Lee marble, as it is well known, is now being used in building the extension of the Capitol at Washington. It was adopted as superior for building purposes to all the other kinds which were offered.

Another fact, in answer to the assertion that it is streaked with blue. The Lee marble has been ordered for the fourteen historical statues which are to be placed in our National Capitol. Distinguished sculptors give it the preference to all other marbles of our country for statuary purposes, not only on account of the purity of its whiteness, but on account of the fineness of its crystal and its susceptibility of a polish equal to the finest of Italian marbles. TRUTH.

Ill-Treatment and Suicide.

Yesterday morning, a woman, named BRIDGET CUFF, aged 21 years, a native of Ireland, committed suicide at No. 22 Mulberry-street. It appears from the evidence adduced before the Coroner, that she had lived with a man named GEORGE BYRON, as his wife, but not married, against whom she lodged a complaint yesterday, and wished him sent to Blackwell's Island. She left her boarding-house about 10 o'clock yesterday morning to see BYRON, and returned about 1 P. M., and soon after went out to procure some water, and was found by WM. P. HOARE in the woodhouse, hanging by the neck to a post, about four feet from the ground, in a kneeling posture, her knees resting on the ground. He raised her up, thinking she might be still alive, but was, upon examination, found to be dead. It would seem that she was induced to commit the rash act from some ill-treatment on the part of BYRON, as she expressed herself freely to a friend, on the morning of her death, to that effect.

Another Stabbing Affair.

JOHN W. SCHUTTS, a native of New-York, 19 years of age, was committed to prison yesterday morning by Justice STUART, on a charge of stabbing Mr. SIMON J. WYCKOFF, No. 434 Third-avenue. The prisoner went into the complainant's house, and was ordered out. He refused to leave, when a quarrel ensued, in which SCHUTTS drew a knife and stabbed WYCKOFF in the hand, shoulder, and left ear. SCHUTTS's bail was fixed at $500.

Charge of Illegal Voting.

Yesterday morning, James Hughes was arrested by policeman Lord, of the Sixth Ward, on a warrant charging him with illegal voting at the Fourth District poll of the Sixth Ward, at the late election. The accused was warned while at the poll, of his danger in voting, yet it is alleged that he swore he was legally entitled to a vote. It appears that he had been living in the District but two or three days previous to the election. Justice Bogart committed him for examination.

COMMON COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Board of Aldermen....THURSDAY, Nov. 16.

REPORTS ADOPTED.

Reports from the Board of Councilmen, remitting taxes of a large number of persons, were concurred in.

In favor of concurring to more effectually light the Battery.

RECEIPTS OF SIXTH AND EIGHTH AVENUE RAILROADS.

A communication received from the Comptroller, gives the receipts of the Sixth and Eighth avenue Railroads for the month of October, as follows:

Sixth avenue railroad	$20,300 52
Eighth avenue railroad	26,337 37
Total	$46,637 89

ORDINANCE FOR SIDEWALKS.

The Committee on Ordinances, to whom had been referred an ordinance passed by the other Board, providing for repairs of sidewalks, appropriating $10,000 therefor, were discharged from its consideration, and Alderman WAKEMAN moved the concurrence of the Board in the action of the Board of Councilmen. After considerable debate the motion was lost by a vote of 10 to 6.

CELEBRATION OF EVACUATION DAY.

A resolution from the Board of Councilmen, appropriating $500 for the celebration of Evacuation Day, and appointing a Committee to make arrangements, was taken up. An amendment by Alderman HENRICK, substituting $1,000 for $500, and one by Alderman LORD, that no part of the appropriation be used for the purchase of intoxicating liquors, were lost. The resolution was then concurred in.

The Board adjourned to Monday evening next.

Board of Councilmen.

THURSDAY, Nov. 16.

PETITIONS REFERRED.

Bill of Dr. F. Glow, for medical services in the Twentieth Ward.

To have the sidewalk on the north side of Thirteenth-street, between Second and Third-avenues, and portions of Second-avenue between Fourteenth and Fifteenth-streets, east side, flagged.

Of Wm. Walsh and others, to have One Hundred and Fifty-first-street, from Eighth-avenue to King's Bridge Road, opened.

MOTIONS AND RESOLUTIONS.

By Councilman MATHER:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the Common Council be requested to prepare the Annual Manual of the Common Council for the year 1855, and cause the same to be published under his direction and supervision, as soon after the 1st January next as is practicable.

REPORTS REFERRED.

Of Committee on roads, in relation to grading Eighty-sixth-street.

From same Committee, in favor of paying Third-avenue, from Forty-fourth to Sixty-second-streets, with block or granite pavement.

Of Committee on Fire Department, in favor of presenting a testimonial to Jno. W. Gaside, for rescuing three persons at the fire at No. 571 Grand-street, on July 1, 1854.

The Board resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, and reported in favor of the ordinance establishing the license of City passenger cars—with the following amendments:

1. That a fine of $200, instead of $100, shall be imposed on all persons who shall own a City car, as specified in the ordinance, without first having obtained a license.

2. That a license of $100 be paid for every car, instead of $50.

3. That each car shall be numbered, having its number painted inside and outside, in some conspicuous place on both sides of the car. A violation of this ordinance shall subject the owner to a penalty of $50.

The Calendar was finished, after a number of papers had been passed to the third reading, when the Committee rose and adjourned till this evening at 5 P. M.

Board of Supervisors.

Held a meeting yesterday, but no business of importance was transacted save the presentation of bills from newspapers of this City for advertising, and the returns of the State and County Election.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT CALENDAR—FRIDAY.

U. S. DISTRICT COURT—Nos. 33, 37, 42 to 49.

SUPREME COURT—General Term.—Nos. 88, 105, 120, 21, 109, 128, 46, 136, 140, 60, 70, 102, 108, 113, 115.

CIRCUIT—Nos. 1072, 1088, 1077, 1209, 1065, 1057, 741.

SUPERIOR COURT—Nos. 747, 415, 194, 137, 260, 701, 81, 646, 419, 1008, 1046, 1011, 1018, 1016, 48, 634, 836, 173, 807, 808, 630, 80, 128, 606, 1016, 1068, 1061, 1052, 836, 854.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—Nov. 16.

Before Hon. Judges Nelson and Betts.

The argument was continued this morning, in the case of George W. Campbell vs. The Atlantic White Lead Company, Mr. Evarts arguing in behalf of the plaintiff.

The case of [illegible] vs. Williamson vs. Jones, [illegible]

Stephens was then taken on and argued by Mr. Field for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Blagden for the defendant.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.—Nov. 16.

Before Judge Ingersoll.

SEIZURES IN ASSISTANCE—SALE OF BARGE—DEVIATION.

Hugh W. Fox et al. vs. The Schooner James F. Hartley.—This libel was filed to recover the value of one hundred and thirty-one tons and one hundred five hundred and thirty-five bags of guano, shipped on board the schooner at Brooklyn, to be carried to Richmond, Va. The libelants allege that the schooner, having received the guano on board, and given bills of lading therefor, then deviated from her proper course by going up the East River, through Hell-Gate, to Westchester, to get some other freight, and that when the vessel took she ran on a rock and was sunk, and the guano was lost.

The statements of the schooner say that when the bills of lading were signed, the libelants understood that she was going up to Morrisania, and that the bills of lading were signed under that understanding. Testimony to that effect was, however, excluded by the Court on the trial.

The claimants also say that the running on the rock was a peril of the sea, and the schooner was not liable therefor; that the schooner was got off and proceeded on her voyage, and while going up the James River struck on another rock and sunk, which was also a peril of the sea, for which the schooner was not liable.

The libelants put their claim upon the alleged deviation in going to Morrisania, and upon carelessness in running upon the rock. I consider that they are correct on both grounds. The going to Morrisania was not in the course of the schooner's voyage from Brooklyn to Richmond, and the running upon a rock in a fair day in Hell Gate was not a peril of the sea.

I order, therefore, a decree for the libelant, with a reference to ascertain the damages.

A question was made as to a right of set-off under an agreement, but that question can be more properly brought up on the coming in of the Commissioner's report.

For libelants, Messrs. Owen, Betts and Vose; for claimants, Messrs. Clark and Rod.

SUPREME COURT—GENERAL TERM—Nov. 16.

FELONIOUS TAKING—BONA FIDE PURCHASERS.

Brower vs. Peabody.—The facts in this case are as follows: The plaintiffs made an agreement, in the regular course of business, with Lovett, one of the defendants, to sell to his firm (Thomas E. Lovett & Co.) fifty casks of potashes for $16,570 9-100. The terms were cash on delivery. After the agreement, Lovett engaged freight on the potashes in the ship Fidelia, then advertised for a voyage to Liverpool; and the plaintiffs, pursuant to their agreement, sent the potashes on board the vessel by their carman, who took receipts in the usual form from the mate—thirty-eight of the receipts stating the casks to have been received from Brower, one of the plaintiffs—the remaining twelve not stating from whom they were received. The delivery of the casks of potashes being completed, Lovett went to the office of the plaintiffs, and, seeing the receipts on the desk on which Brower was writing, stole and carried them away. In the course of the same day, he presented them to the owners of the ship, and procured a bill of lading in his own name. Drawing a bill of exchange against the shipment, he assigned the bill of lading to Richard Hunnock, who, in good faith, advanced to him, upon this security, the sum of $1,482 23. Peabody, the master of the ship, refused to deliver the potashes to the plaintiffs, but delivered them to the holders of the bills of lading in Liverpool. The opinion of the Court, MITCHELL, P. J., dissenting, was delivered by CLERKE, J.—It is maintained by the plaintiffs that the receipts having been stolen, their right to the possession of the goods cannot be affected by the felony.

A thief cannot make a title to stolen property, and the owner can reclaim it from any one, however innocently he might have obtained possession of it, and whatever may be the amount which he paid for it. If, for the purpose of potashes in question remained in the store of the plaintiffs, and the defendant Lovett stole them while in the store, and then deposited them on board the Fidelia, the master of the vessel would be undoubtedly under an obligation to restore them at once to the plaintiffs. By this rule the law secures the rights of the proprietor in personal chattels from being divested, in cases where he has done nothing to induce an innocent party to suppose the property to be in any other. But it would not be consistent with the policy of a commercial community to extend the rule beyond such cases; and in England this rule is in many circumstances practically relaxed; for it is an old and familiar principle there that all sales and contracts of anything vendible in fair or market overt (open and not only be good between the parties, but also binding on all those that have any right or property therein), and in London, every day except Sunday, is a market-day; and every shop in which goods are exposed publicly for sale is market overt, for such things only as the owner professes to trade in. Here we have no market overt; although the nature and extent of our commercial association render it equally desirable, that innocent purchasers or bailees in a fair, open, and regular manner, should not be afterwards subjected to difficulty in ascertaining if the knavery of the party who has transferred the goods to them. If we are, therefore, to modify the rule at all instead of being extended, it should be contracted, in the present case it is conceded that the receipts were stolen; that does it follow then this can be said of the property to which they relate? and, I think the fallacy, so ingeniously presented on behalf of the plaintiffs, consists in disregarding this distinction. The property, but it is not contended, was placed on board the Fidelia by the plaintiffs, without any communication with the owners; but, on the contrary, Lovett alone communicated with them, treating with them as the owners of it, and agreeing with them for their sight and transportation of it to Liverpool. The plaintiffs, pursuant to their agreement with Lovett, and pursuant to Lovett's agreement with the ship-owners, sent it to the place designated by Lovett; and, although they did not intend that the stolen property in the pot-ashes should pass from them until the latter paid for it, yet is it consistent with the policy required by the usages and interests of trade to consider the appropriation of it, under such circumstances, actual larceny. I can scarcely be offended that the plaintiffs had done nothing, previous to the abstraction of the receipts, to beget a belief that Lovett had become the lawful owner of the shipment; as that Peabody, the master, knowing that his owners contracted to transport the goods, without any reference to the plaintiffs, or any interposition on their part, supposed himself from the beginning to be the bailee of Lovett. Was there not at least some color of a delivery to him—not absolute, of course, but sufficient to negative the idea that the method by which the shipment was transferred was of the same felonious character as that by which the receipts were taken? By this delivery on board the vessel designated by Lovett, without any communication with the owners of the Fidelia leaving them under the probable impression that there was at least a qualified ownership in him, and thus allowing him to assume some indicia of such right, his whole conduct in obtaining possession of the property should be deemed fraudulent rather than felonious, and although where property has been actually stolen, the reclamation of the owner is, not taking immediate steps to notify others of the theft, cannot affect the character of the transaction itself; yet when considered in connection with the previous circumstances of the case, the omission of the plaintiffs to caution the owners or master of the Fidelia of the stealing of the receipts by Lovett, contributed to confer the apparent right of property in him; and it was their duty, as it was entirely and officiously in their power, to put the plaintiffs right on the subject, without delay, as soon as they discovered that the receipts were stolen.

The judgment should be affirmed with costs.

The dissenting opinion of Judge Mitchell is as follows:

MITCHELL, J.—The barrels of potashes belonged to the plaintiffs, and they never passed their title to Lovett or any one else. If no receipt for them had been given by the Captain of the vessel, that title would still have remained in the plaintiffs. Such receipt was given and was in possession of the plaintiffs, and was stolen from them by Lovett. Then as no title can be acquired even in favor of a subsequent bona fide purchaser by the defendant from the true owner, if the receipt of the vessel and a bill of lading in possession by a bona fide holder, gave no title against the true owner. Nor does the omission of the true owner to take the most judicious means to give notice to the defendant, the Captain of the vessel, defeat the true owner's title. There should, I think, be a new trial, costs to abide the event.

SUPREME COURT—IN CHAMBERS—Nov. 15.

Before Hon. Justice Roseh.

ORDERS.

Smith vs. Sewell.—Inquest set aside, and cause restored upon terms.

McCabe vs. Keseback.—Motion denied, with $5 costs.

Tileston vs. Quintard.—Motion denied, with $5 costs.

Charlotte Vredenburgh vs. Ira Vredenburgh.—The testimony must be subscribed by the witnesses.

Story vs. Van Voorst.—Motion granted, without costs.

Graham vs. Avery.—Order dismissed, with $5 costs.

Fehr vs. Schlatzey.—Order to show cause dismissed, without costs.

Delmonico vs. Josephine Delmonico.—Order signed by Justice Clerke.

Before Justice Mitchell.

Parish vs. Carsley.—Case sealed.

Before Justice Morris—Nov. 14.

Stebbins vs. Donald.—Receiver to be appointed, on giving security in $6,000.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM—Nov. 16.

Before Hon. Judge Duer.

PROMISSORY NOTES—SECURITY SALE OF STEAMBOATS.

Allen vs. Haggerty.—In this suit the plaintiff complains that the defendant was possessed of two promissory notes made by the plaintiff, amounting together to $14,000, which he held in trust for the benefit of Maria H. Andrews, wife of Thomas Andrews. That in order to secure their payment, he transferred to the defendant the steamboat Ocean, and it was mutually agreed that the defendant might sell the steamboat, and pay over to the plaintiff any balance that might remain after taking from the proceeds the amount due upon said notes. The plaintiff further to secure the defendant, subsequently transferred to him another steamboat, called the Telos, upon a like mutual agreement. The defendant said these vessels for a sum exceeding, as is alleged, $20,000, and when called upon by the plaintiff to account for the proceeds and to pay over the balance, if any, refused to do so.

The defendant alleges that a bill of sale only of the steamboat Ocean was transferred to him, as collateral security for payment of the notes, without the knowledge of the bonds which was finally sold for $15,000, all of which was duly accounted for to the plaintiff, which was duly accepted by the plaintiff in full satisfaction of the said notes, and he, the said defendant, paid the balance of the said notes, and paid the balance by the said plaintiff, and the said defendant, and the said plaintiff, and the said defendant, and the said plaintiff, and the said defendant, and

FOR SALE.

HOUSES FOR SALE at a GREAT SACRIFICE IN BROOKLYN.—Three new houses in Amity-street, near Clinton, containing 10 rooms each, with all the modern improvements, and in good order, will be sold for $1,800 each, or $5,400 the lot, cash. Apply to J. H. WHITNEY, No. 16 Warren-st., N. Y.

HOUSE FOR SALE.—The three-story frame house in Hall-st., No. 10, between Greene and Lexington-avs., Brooklyn. Lot 20x100 feet. It has 10 rooms in order. Inquire of WM. H. TOWNSEND, Cash. Apply to S. H. WHITNEY, No. 16 Warren-st., N. Y.

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE.—The valuable Farm, now for sale the Rev. and Centre-house now occupied by the Rev. Dr. Bethune, Brooklyn Heights, in the town of Gowanus, under the Brooklyn Water-Works, and bounded on one side by the Wallabout River, the property is now and being laid out and provided with the most improvements. The place contains 40 acres of fruit trees of every description, flowering shrubs, grape-vines, &c., and the rent, buildings and property will be exchanged. If desired, for a place in New-York. Price $6,500. Apply to THOMAS HOPANAY, No. 102 Front-st., or to A. WAY BROWN, Berlin Tinge Office, New-York; or to the owner, on the premises.

Bainbridge, Nov. 1, 1854. W. H. BEERS.

TO MILLERS AND MANUFACTURERS.—FOR SALE, the Water-power known as the Middle Falls, on the Saugatuck River, with about 300 acres of land adjacent, water-power, &c. The Mill is over 2 miles long, and contains 1,000 horse-power. There is also a New Mill, Carding and Fulling Mill, two dwelling-houses, three dwellings, a store, and the usual Dwellings. The water-fall is of 40 feet, and the property is well calculated for an extensive manufacturing establishment, of either cotton or wool, of Sing. A portion of the purchase money can remain on mortgage. For further particulars, apply to the subscriber, residing on the premises, or to MORRIS MORGAN, No. 1 Stone-place, New-York.

ASTER BROOK HOUSE FOR SALE OR TO LET.—Pleasantly situated on the Hudson River, in the Highlands of the Hudson River, and in walking distance of a few minutes from the Station, and in sight of the Hudson River, and adjacent to a beautiful water-power. The house is 45 feet by 35 feet, well finished, and finished with marble mantels, and is in good order. The grounds are well stocked with fruit trees, and the premises are in good order. For further particulars, apply to MORRIS MORGAN, No. 1 Stone-place, New-York.

VALUABLE FARM FOR SALE.—Containing 85 acres, situated in Middletown, N. J., 35 miles from Bordentown. The land is in high state of cultivation, in well fenced, and has all about 4000 of trees of all kinds. The buildings consist of a large frame house, barn, carriage-house, and other necessary outbuildings. Price, $4,000. Inquire of CAMPBELL & CROWELL, No. 280 Broadway, corner of Pulton-st.

VALUABLE COUNTRY RESIDENCE FOR SALE.—The late residence of GEO. H. PEGRAM, Esq., situated on Elizabethtown, N. J., about half an hour's ride of New-York. There are fourteen acres of land of very superior quality, upon which is a dwelling-house, with all the modern improvements. Inquire of CAMPBELL & CROWELL, No. 280 Broadway, corner of Pulton-st.

COTTAGE FOR SALE.—The new Elizabethtown Cottage for sale in Morristown, N. J. Building has seven well-proportioned rooms, with hot and cold water in kitchen and bath-room. All improvements are in the best and most approved style, and finished in oak, with all the new improvements. The cottage stands on two acres of land. The premises can be seen at any time. CHARLES LAMBERT.

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE.—For good bank or fire insurance stock, a three-story and basement house in 20th-st., between 6th and 7th-ave., with all the improvements, and in good order. Possession can be had immediately, or it will be rented to a good tenant. SAMUEL EDDY, No. 68 Wall-st., basement.

HARLEM—SPLENDID COUNTRY SEAT FOR SALE.—On 106th-st., corner 7th-av.—The house was built by the owner in the best manner; has 14 rooms, Croton water, hot and cold bath, &c. Also stable, &c., complete with a large number of choice fruit trees, grape vines, strawberries, &c. Apply to J. O. HIGGINS, No. 6 Wall-st.

BELL-PLACE, FORKERS—THREE CITY LOTS FOR SALE.—Corner of Bell and Crosby-sts., situate in the midst of great improvements. Also, two lots on Grand-st., between Wooster and S. Mercer-sts., by 100 feet in depth, adjacent to the river. Apply to J. O. HIGGINS, No. 6 Wall-st., New-York.

12 LARGE LOTS, NOW FOR CITY PROPERTY, FOR SALE.—At the Rum, New-York, at reduced. E. D. LAY, No. 2 John-st., Sun-Office, or G. W. DEWEY, Plainfield, New-Jersey.

TO LET.

THREE HANDSOME FAMILY HOUSES TO LET IN BROOKLYN.

Within five minutes' walk of the Wall-st. Ferry. THREE HOUSES are of brownstone brown-stone, with all the modern improvements, on Henry-st., Willoughby-st., and on the block of the Willoughby Hotel, and are in most beautiful part of the city.

The houses are now built in the most perfect manner, finished throughout in oak, panelled ceilings, ornamented cornices, gas, water, &c., marble mantels, carved, plain, and stained glass, marble hearths, slate mantels, range, hot and cold water, gas, &c., &c. Rent, $400 each. Inquire of EDWARDS PIERREPONT, No. 27 Wall-st., or on the premises.

STEAM POWER TO LET.

AT THE EMPIRE STORE, foot of East 20th-st., New-York. Both steam and power connected by any required shaft, to be let by the day, week, or month. Apply to SEARS & LEE, before 10 A. M. and after 3 P. M.

HOUSE TO LET.—One of the new of brownstone, two stories and a half high, in Lexington-av., between the 34 and 35th-sts. Lot 20 feet wide, 100 deep. Rent, $400. Apply to JOHN CALLAGHAN, corner 33d-st. and 3d-av., or to MOSES WOOD & BAKER, No. 45 Pine-st.

HOUSE TO LET.—A three-story brick house, with all modern improvements, No. 20 Summit-st., South Brooklyn, a good neighborhood. Rent without furniture, $300. Inquire on the premises, or of Rent low. Inquire next door, or No. 3 Maiden-lane, N. Y. MARSH & CO.

HOUSE TO LET.—The three-story basement brownstone house, No. 144 West 22d-st., between 6th and 7th-aves. Has every modern improvement, and is in good order. Apply to JOHN CAMPBELL, No. 280 Pearl-st., near Water-line, New-York.

HOUSE TO LET.—No. 17 Great Jones-st., four story and basement, with all the modern improvements. Inquire of Mr. 20 said street.

HOUSE TO LET.—The fine house No. 97 Sackett-st., Brooklyn. Apply to GEO. H. NORMAN, U. S. Hotel, or to W. EARRY, No. 104 Centre-st., New-York.

THREE ELEGANT HOUSES TO LET.—(With a Conservatory in front) in River Terrace, Brooklyn, commanding a fine view of the East River and Bay, are to be let with every convenience, water, gas, bath, &c. The rent varies of 17 elegant houses belongs to ROBERT L. STEVENS, which makes it his interest to see every purchaser to be pleased and satisfied. Inquire at the office, corner Hudson and Mott, Hoboken, of EDWARD MARTIN, Agent.

DWELLING HOUSE AND FACTORY TO LET.—The three-story Brick Dwelling House, in city, situated and fitted up for a Hat Factory, No. 7 Light-st. Also, the large and very handsome Factory and four buildings corner of 3d-st. and 10th-av., Yorkville, and Cottage, Pennsylvania-ave., Williamsburgh.

EXHIBITION ROOMS AND GALLERIES TO LET.—The last of Mr. Cozzens's Fine Furniture Rooms and Galleries, lately occupied by Association of Design, No. 335 Broadway, and now occupied by E. Corcoran, Auctioneer, in sale galleries. Apply to E. CORCORAN, on the premises.

ROOMS TO LET.—No. 193 Broadway, corner of Dey-st., suitable for lawyers or for office. Inquire of CHARLES HUNT, Room No. 17, or THOMAS H. BODMAN, No. 9 Wall-st.

OFFICES TO LET.—A fine suite of furnished offices, with or without furniture, in a Broadway. Address WALKER & CO., New-York Post-Office.

BROADWAY BILLIARD ROOMS, &c., &c.—Two or three of the handsomest rooms in the Metropolis, adjoining the Prescott House, to let. Also lofts and cellars.

STORE TO LET.—Part of the store No. 10 Canal-st., adjoining Hudson-st., to be let. Can be used in whole or in part, as a fancy or business store, or as a warehouse for the accommodation of heavy articles, being near wood-way, and about to grade a thoroughfare on that street. Part of the store is now occupied with furniture and ranges. Inquire on the premises.

STORES OR WAREHOUSES TO LET.—In the Brownstone front of Appleton's Building, corner of Leonard and Elm-sts., adjoining Hudson-st., and to open into the building, which is to be let in whole or in part, to wholesale business, No. 2 Leonard-st., to be rented on Broadway. Apply to B. AP PLETON & CO., No. 346 Broadway.

STORE TO LET.—No. 108 Fulton-st., Sun Building, possession immediately. To one responsible tenant, lease for five and a half years will be given. Rent $1,00. Apply at the Sun Office.

STEAM POWER TO LET.—In light and easy rooms, in the Tribune Building. Apply to J. C. HULL, & SON, No. 108 Chatham.

WATCHES AND JEWELRY.

GOLD WATCHES AND STERLING SILVER WARE.—Wholesale and retail, a full assortment of Diamond, Gold Pens, Pencils, Jewelry, Gold Watches, Gold Lever, Gold Lever Watches, Silver Watches, Plated Ware, Plated Cake Baskets, Spoons, &c. All warranted to be as represented. SQUIRE, LANDER & CO., No. 9 Fulton-st., N. Y.

TO TARGET EXCURSIONISTS.—Handsome prizes, suitable for the usual articles, in new and best styles, furnished at the lowest prices, by SQUIRE, LANDER & CO., No. 9 Fulton-st., N. Y.

FURNITURE.

NOTICE.—BILLIARD TABLES.—If you wish to purchase a superior Billiard Table for private or public, call and examine the patent Slate Bumper Cushions Tables made by Messrs. GRISTEN & DECKER, of No. 9 Warren-st., where there are some of the best tables.

INDIA RUBBER.—Of every variety, which will be warranted better than 24 to 48 per cent, and much cheaper; also, Pillows and Cushions, Mattresses, Sheets, Bathing Tubes, Clothing, Shoes, Belts, Suspenders, Gloves, Hats, Caps, Boots, Leggings, Coats, Ponchos, Rubber Cloth, Rubber Paper, Rubber Cement, Rubber Varnish, Rubber Paint, Rubber Hose, Rubber Belting, Rubber Packing, Rubber Springs, Rubber Stamps, Rubber Dolls, Rubber Toys, Rubber Balls, Rubber Pipes, Rubber Tubes

New-York Daily Times.

PAINTING.

Leutze's Battle of Monmouth.

For much weeks past the public has had the opportunity of viewing LEUTZE'S central historical picture, "The Battle of Monmouth." We have paid the exhibition a number of visits, and forgot that the original impression still remains upon our mind, which is that of disappointment. This is more to be regretted, because the mechanical execution of the picture possesses merit. The deficiencies of the faults in the composition, lies in the evident fact that Mr. LEUTZE has not properly prepared his mind to grapple with the subject, and starting wrong, his conclusion is meagre and unsatisfactory. It is doubtful whether WASHINGTON at the battle of Monmouth can be expressed on canvas—the attempt is certainly an ambitious one, and however successful, would only illustrate a moment when a naturally chivalrous man committed an error, and a god like hero for an instant lost that calm bearing on all other occasions so characteristic of his conduct.

The events of the battle of Monmouth could have been dramatized, and a point gained favorable for high artistic composition. Gen. LEE was with the advance of 5,000 men, with orders to engage the enemy; WASHINGTON was with the main army, bringing it up to support the van. History tells us that WASHINGTON rode ahead of his forces, and, to his indignation, met LEE "retreating," (or "retired,") with his whole force. The meeting of the two Generals is the moment that Mr. LEUTZE has attempted to portray.

The figure of WASHINGTON can scarcely be recognized as from the same hand that produced the "Crossing of the Delaware." The chief figure on that picture is dramatic enough just to verge on the extreme, but we now have not WASHINGTON, but "Old Put," rushing down the precipices of Stony Point. The likeness is entirely obliterated in the attempted portrayal of anger, and in the Continental hat, fairly over the eyes, when it is the instinct of every man, when excited, to brush aves the intruding lock of hair from the brow. The most extraordinary action, however, is in the carriage of the right arm. No military man, no one who reflects on the natural attitude of self-defence, will admire its position. We know of no circumstances where a soldier would extend his arm and sword directly perpendicular into the air, forming a straight line, by measurement, that would reach from the shoulder to the feet. Such an attitude exposes the chest, and makes the performer conspicuous that his front is open to every attack. But, did WASHINGTON with his sword menace General LEE? Can any one imagine so degrading an action in WASHINGTON towards any one, much less an equal in rank, and then a rival for the office of Commander-in-Chief? Does a General ever draw his sword on the field of battle any more than he does in a drawing room?

General LEE tells no story indicative of the supposed emotions of his mind—in truth, to the uninitiated, he might be supposed to represent the calm, unmoved soldier, who was placed in the back ground, to represent by example and contrast, the distorted action of the Commander-in-Chief. We have charged Mr. LEUTZE with a want of preparatory study, and it not only shows itself in the delineation of WASHINGTON, but even in the form of his horse. It is proverbial that at the time of the Revolution Virginia was famous for blooded animals, and WASHINGTON was, perhaps, one of the most successful raisers of such stock. The Virginian hunter was a high-mettled, sharp-boned animal, and kept by taste and by judgment in racing condition. Such a horse in the fatigues of a real campaign, would by the very action of his mind, without regard to his excessive labor, have not one pound of extra flesh. Mr. LEUTZE's horse is of the heaviest Normandy breed, and so fat and sleek, that he might have been just taken from a cattle show held in the old County of Berks, and represented in that condition, too, at the close of a day of hard work, when it was so hot that men and animals died of excessive heat.

In actual war, the holiday soldier disappears. There is something sublime in the very negligence and damaged appearance of officers, men, and animals engaged in the strife of battle. All useless trappings are rubbed off at the first onset; nothing remains fitest but the flashing eye, the firm tread, the instinct of destruction. Yet WASHINGTON's dress is in perfect order. Why could he not have had one slight powder-begrimed look or accident, to speak of the physical contact with the engines of death? This would have been allowable—been hailed with delight. Mr. LEUTZE felt that he must do something in this way; and he has committed the unpardonable fault of his whole picture—he has dressed WASHINGTON! LEE—the only thing lead-colored in the soldier and gentleman—and left him with his ashen locks divested of the pretension of full dress, and slovenly streaming in the wind.

The troops (?) supposed to represent LEE's division are put upon the canvas as a heterogeneous mass—not in a distinctly retreat before the enemy. If this were true of the picked men of WASHINGTON's army, it should never have been portrayed on canvas; but as it is not true, the scene becomes doubly offensive. Not an American ran away at the battle of Monmouth. LEE ordered a retreat; his columns retired slowly and compactly from the vantage ground, probably in indignant at the action of their commander as WASHINGTON himself. There was no appeal made to these men to stand firm. LEE said he would form them on the ground where he stood, and give battle to the enemy. He performed his promise, and the victory rested with the American arms. The personal appearance of these men are, to our surprise, as strangely misconceived as is their military conduct. Every man under LEE was a regular, and all wore the continental dress. Then wherefore the strange fantastic clothing, as if they had hurried at a moment's warning, from the farm-house, the shop board, and the backwoods? The physiognomy of these men is not American; the race never presents so many contrasting forms and mongrel faces. This variety is highly artistic, but it is only expressive of men who form the outcasts of European cities. Equality of position, of food, of sentiment, make a marked sameness in the American face, which distinguishes it from all other people.

On many parts of the picture are episodes of painting that create enthusiasm, as finely illustrated in some of the prominent figures—the old Continental uniform, so chosen in the American relief. We might designate groups of great excellence, but which, nevertheless, from an necessary association with the artist's proposed object of exhibiting the battle of Monmouth.

The Western hunter and his dying child, in same respects, is the finest we have yet seen, and would form, if the group stood alone, (with some exception of the surroundings,) a naturally interesting episode, characteristic of the scenes of the early settlement of the West. The landscape first appears so cold and lifeless, but the heritage is soon very impressive, we visit for Jersey soil—the incident, after having been successively contested upon by nature and military, and pourtrayed by a man of unusual intensity. Mr. LEUTZE must be capable of better things than this picture. If he [illegible]—and solemnly enter upon the book of painting our health sake, he could associate his name with the immortal deeds of the [illegible] of continental history. We have the power of [illegible] to his privileges of being an artist [illegible] the power themselves, and be [illegible] to fear.

As a picture for exhibition, the Battle of Monmouth will be popular; there are exactness of color which will please; and it is a battle, and will, therefore, enlist a cordial sympathy—for military glory is, after all, the ruling sentiment of our people; and as long as there is a display of uniforms, of artillery, and men presenting "the grizzly front of war," it must have admirers. Admitting this predisposition on the part of the public to be pleased, we regret that Mr. LEUTZE has let so fine an opportunity escape of giving a new impulse to taste, as would have been the case had the Battle of Monmouth justly ranked among the masterpieces of art.

USURY LAWS—No. XI.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

We have carefully studied the Report adopted by the Chamber of Commerce, on the Usury Laws, and adopt it as the basis of the continuance of our remarks on that subject. We confess ourselves disappointed, and regret that so weak and illogical a paper has emanated from so highly respectable and intelligent a body of gentlemen, whose pursuits and studies should have enabled them to present to the public a better defence of their project, the entire repeal of the Usury Laws. The Report, which we propose to consider seriatim, opens with the presentation of the history and characteristics of our present laws; this may have been important information to the Chamber, and as a proper and necessary part of a Report intended to present the reasons for their repeal; and then proceeds to state the arguments on both sides of the question, and to discuss the subject at length.

Their first paragraph begins by begging the whole question: "Whenever the unavoidable vicissitudes of trade carry the rate of interest the smallest fraction above the legal rate, the law comes in in a meddlesome and oppressive way to complicate and confuse all financial movements." What is this but assuming at the very outset of the investigation, before a single proposition has been stated and considered, that the law is meddlesome and oppressive, and so ought to be repealed? This mode of treating the question pervades the report; there is scarcely an attempt at argument, but a constant repetition of the views of the Committee as correct, and a denial of those of their opponents.

It is alleged that the law has been inoperative; that is no proof that it is inexpedient; there are many laws which are to a greater or less degree inoperative, the laws against gambling and the vending of lottery tickets which is a modified form of usury, the sale of intoxicating drinks without license; which we do not believe the Chamber of Commerce would propose to repeal, and therefore nothing is determined beyond the selfishness of those engaged in the trade in more money; who, though otherwise honorable men, violate the spirit of the law in that relation while they would not violate it in others though deemed unwise and injudicious. The argument, if it has any force, is destruction to the first principle of society, the necessity of obedience to the law.

We do not think the allegation that "Grand Juries, unmindful of their oaths turn leaden ears and blind eyes to its constant infraction," is in the best possible taste; so grave a charge against so important a body as the Grand Inquest of the country, should never be made, except upon the most undoubted evidence and for imperative reasons. The further position, that "sharp-sighted Shylocks" are at the bottom of the opposition to the proposed repeal, is equally in bad taste, hardly better than the charge that all the advocates of repeal are usurers; it will hardly be accepted by the public or add to the value of the Document.

The Report next proceeds "to present a fair digest of the reasons that have generally been assigned for their stringent measures," as follows:

"First—It is claimed that Government originates money, that it is the creation of the Law, deriving its powers from legislation—is the only article that is made a legal tender in the payment of debts; that citizens have neither the legal nor the moral right to use money or coin for any other purpose than a circulating medium whereby to measure value; that the money of the public does not stand in the same relation to them that their property does. "These propositions they admit to be the "main foundation of the claim" of their opponents; but they carefully avoid their formal discussion, and content themselves with simply denying them. They do not even state specifically what they mean by money; whether coin or bank credit. They certainly do not mean to deny the obvious truth that Government alone creates coin, or that coin alone, and not its substance, gold, is the only legal tender. It is difficult to determine what they admit or deny, except the right and expediency of the law fixing the rate of interest; but denial is not proof nor argument. The claim "that citizens have neither the legal nor the moral right to use money or coin for any other purpose than as a circulating medium," we never heard made; all the ordinary uses of money, its loan at legal interest, and its appropriation for other uses, are lawful and common. They seem in doubt of their ability to convince their opponents of the truth of their positions, notwithstanding they "have upon their side all historic facts from the earliest records of civilization, also all the experience of modern times, together with all the prominent political economists for a century past," and console themselves with the expectation that notwithstanding all this array of experience and authority if they "fail in establishing their own opinions and are compelled to admit all the rights claimed by our State Government, still the restrictionists will in time see the impossibility of using such a right in the way they propose;" which means that even if the right to restrict the rate of interest is established, and the deliberate judgment of the public should remain as at present, still the lenders of money will find means to defeat the law and continue to evade its provisions.

The next step in their argument is that "The only legitimate province of any Government is, to do what their constituency require of them, in preparing the material that the public may have previously found by experience to be the most suitable for a circulating medium;" but finding this hardly a safe position, as it involves an exclusive currency of coin, they conclude there is another duty of Government, "to take all needful action towards securing the safety of whatever may be used as currency." Now, if they mean by money, gold only, and if the coinage, as they allege, "adds an intrinsic value to the metal, why make coin alone a legal tender? And if their position is true, that the money of the public stands in the same relation to them as their other property, why have any specific legal tender? Why not make all property a legal tender, at its market price? This would be the logical conclusion from the premises of the Report.

After an erroneous statement of the origin of the authority of the Government of the United States, as from the people, and not the States as the possessors of original sovereignty and the right to coin money; and the object and results of coinage, with a denial of its security, except for commerce. We are introduced to "one of our first literary men"—not one of the "eminent political economists for a century past," who are not indicated, that we might study their theories, but one whose pursuits and studies have had little connection with economy and financial topics. This hypothetical observation which he presents as conclusive and adequate to set aside the deliberate judgment of society, proceeds in a manner precisely similar to the Report; to coin or deny all the facts of the case and then assume the conclusions as logical deductions from admitted premises. Eminent literary acquirements are not necessarily more certain to qualify an individual to decide properly on economy and financial questions, than eminent scientific capabilities are in the performance of a Bunsen task; both have often failed in their attempts to accomplish results out of the line of their acquisitions.

The Report next proceeds to adopt, as true, propositions it has previously denied. "The coinage of money, and the making any metallic currency a legal tender is the prerogative of sovereignty, and belongs to the Government of the United States, and yet the Government, according to their previous statement, "cannot originate money—it is not the creation of law; and the money of the people stands in the same relation to them as their other property. A man may grow corn or make cloth, but he cannot make money; he may sell his corn, his cloth, or his silver spoons, if he can find a purchaser, but he cannot compel his creditor to take either of them in payment of his debt, however difficult it may be to obtain money; and yet money, it is alleged, is merely one form of property, and has no exclusive origin or quality in the arrangements of society, and it is therefore unjust to restrict its owners in its use. If the Chamber of Commerce think to carry their measure by such arguments, they will find themselves mistaken, or we have misapprehended public intelligence.

The debates upon the report, given in the Journal of Commerce, strikingly exhibit the conflicting opinions which exist in their body upon the subject, and render the confident assumption of the obvious truth of its positions ridiculous. The first objector sees, at a glance, the impropriety of permitting those who enjoy the exclusive privilege of creating the money of the public, to fix the price of its use. The next denies the possibility of carrying the measure if attempted; he would, however, accept the principle if only the interest upon mortgages was to be fixed by law; why the basis of all wealth, the land, should be denied the benefit of what is to be claimed to be so obvious a right, we are unable to comprehend. Another denies that Banks are the creators of money; admitting, however, that they are the creators of currency, but not money; a very wise distinction, by one who, doubtless, comprehends the whole subject. Another proposes that the Legislature be asked to confine the privilege to New-York, and thus drive all the money to the City in the period of pressure, that our fellow citizens of the State may not only have the profit of paying extra interest, but being compelled to come here to borrow. He must have a high opinion of the wisdom which is to concentrate at the Capitol of the "Empire State." Shall we send our quota, and will it be competent to the care of "the second financial force in the world?" At present we seem unable to manage the affairs of our focus so as to retain enough of the million of gold which is semi-monthly pouring through it, to preserve its finances from jeopardy—its merchants from bankruptcy, or its mechanics from idleness and poverty. A.

FORESIGHT FOR.—The New-Orleans Picayune says: "We have heard in our day of legal quibbles, but if a Philadelphia lawyer can beat the following, lately argued to a Jury in this city, he can take our hat, aye, and our corduroys. The prisoner is on trial for entering a house in the night-time, with intent to steal. The testimony was clear that he had made an opening sufficiently large to admit the upper part of his body, and through which he protruded himself about half way, and stretching out his arm committed the theft. Mr. Obfuscate Brief addresses the Jury. "What an outrage," (looking horrified, and with outstretched and trembling arms,) "I repeat, what an outrage upon your intelligence and your common sense is it for the State's Attorney to ask at your hands the conviction of my client on such testimony! The law is against entering a house—and can a man be said to enter a house when only one half of his body is in and the other half out? Gentlemen, look to the Divine Law on this point. God commanded Adam and Eve not to eat the apple—I ate the whole of the apple. And all the commentators agree that if they had only eaten one-half, they would not have been expelled from the blooming garden of Eden." The Jury brought in a verdict of "guilty" as to one-half of his body from the waist up, and "not guilty" as to the other half. The Judge sentenced the guilty half to one year's imprisonment, leaving it to the prisoner's option to have the innocent half cut off, or take it along with him."

CLARK MILLS.—We are pained to hear that the establishment of this distinguished artist has been visited with a calamity by which he suffers severe pecuniary loss, and which will delay the completion of the great works which he had commenced—the equestrian statues of WASHINGTON and JACKSON. Yesterday afternoon, while his furnace was in full blast, the roof, from some unexplained cause, took fire, and notwithstanding great efforts were made to save the model of the statute of Gen. JACKSON and the building, they were, in an incredibly short time, destroyed by the flames. Several castings of the statue had been taken and placed outside of the foundry, and were saved. The loss sustained by this fire is estimated at six to ten thousand dollars, and the destruction of the model for the statue is particularly to be regretted, as it cannot be reproduced but with great labor and heavy expense. There was no insurance on the property. We give place to this intelligence with sincere regret, but knowing the indomitable energy of Mr. MILLS as we do, we do not entertain a doubt that he will arise like the fabled bird of antiquity, and pursue his business with renewed energy and success. He has been tried in the furnace of affliction, but ultimately he will come out unscathed.—Washington Union, 11th.

LIGHTNING AND CONSUMPTION.—People are ruled and guided by sensations more than they are by reason. For example, about seventy persons, perhaps, are yearly killed in the United States by lightning, while those who perish by consumption are reckoned by hundreds of thousands. This disease is often evidently induced by a cold; and yet how few are alarmed at a cold, which so frequently eventuates in death. On the other hand, thousands of silly people are frightened by a thunder shower—so big with blessings—so generally harmless. This foolish timidity is the consequence of the vicious example or conversation of parents, guardians and servants, operating on children in their presence—exciting alarm, where there is no cause for fear, and thus producing a mental weakness and suffering, which children properly brought up never experience. An exhibition of the celestial phenomena of electricity is to them a source of keen and exciting enjoyment, instead of cowardly terror.—Newark Advertiser.

WAR AND LITERATURE.—This, indeed, is one striking way in which the war operates on literature—that it sends out the national thought in new and unexplored geographical directions; consecrates names and spots never heard of before; makes new ground rich with great acts and associations. A week or two ago, and there was a stream in the Crimea flowing on, night and day, quiet and unregarded; and at one place, where a road crossed this stream, high steeps rose above it, over which, day and night, passed too, disturbing nothing save mayhap, a loose stone, that would roll down into the gullies; and now that spot belongs to the imagination of Great Britain for evermore, and a perpetual allusion in literature will be made to the battle of the Alma. Does it not seem as if the place and name had been alike predestined! Who would not wish to see a photograph of those Crimean steeps, that have waited six thousand years, and, at least, are famous? [London Leader.

DEATH OF A VETERAN ACTOR.—Mr. SAMUEL DRAKE, Sen., the venerable pioneer of the drama in the West, and the grand-father of Miss JULIA DEAN, the actress, died in Kentucky, near Louisville, on the 17th ult., at the age of eighty-seven years. Mr. DRAKE was a native of England, but settled in the West about 1816, and has since been managed theatres at Louisville, Cincinnati, Lexington and Frankfort. He was the father of SAMUEL, ALEXANDER, JULIA and JAMES G. DRAKE, Mrs. DUCKNAM and GEORGIANA, persons of the drama who won considerable renown and were more than ordinarily gifted people. His youngest son, SAMUEL G. DRAKE, was first known as a writer of exquisite taste.

COALS TO NEWCASTLE.—The New-Orleans Bee says that a few days since six casks of excellent claret wine, purchased at the rate of $100 per cask, were shipped from that city on board a Havre packet, and consigned to Paris. The wine harvest in France has been exceedingly poor this year in consequence of the disease of the vine, and the demand for the better qualities in Europe is so great as to justify dealers in exporting back to France, whence they will undoubtedly realize a profit.

☞ The Baptist Almanac for 1855 states that in 1850, there were in the United States 10,121 Baptist Churches, 8,475 ministers, and 868,754 members. Three are all regular Baptists. In addition there are 5,000 Anti-missionary Baptists, 51,775 Free-will Baptists, 2,120 General, 5,357 Seventh-Day, 6,000 Tunkers, 12,500 Church of God, and 225,000 Reformers. All the New-England States are reported to have lost 22,000, while Virginia alone has gained. The Southern States of Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, and South Carolina and Tennessee, have 264,875. In the Western States, about 75,000 members are reported.

A gem which is found on trial to be a perfect substitute for the diamond, has been discovered in sufficient quantities in the north of Texas. The discoverer is Dr. G. G. Shumard, connected with Capt. Marcy's expedition.

Advices from Great Salt Lake City, state that the troops sent out under command of Col. Steptoe, arrived there on the 25th day of August. The troops, as a general thing, had been well received, although the Indians had been instructed not to attack the strangers into their families. Two Indians were recently hung for murder—the first executed in the territory. Money is very little money in circulation. The harvest and the future of those crops have unmasted the resources of the people, and the only main in the country is in the hands of the Gentile merchants and the elders of the Church. This last Summer many families had emended from the Church and gone into the States. There are hundreds who would follow them, if they were able.

On the 21st of October, at 25 minutes before 6 o'clock P. M., a shock of an earthquake was felt at San Francisco. The motion was horizontal, and nearly from East to West. There were five distinct vibrations, occupying something like two and a half or three seconds. The shock was so violent that several in the lower portion of the city left their houses in alarm. The air was exceedingly sultry, both previous and subsequent to the occurrence.

[Advertisement.]

WHERE DO THEY ALL COME FROM!—Was the expression we heard yesterday afternoon in HEARD, CLAPP & Co.'s, Dry Goods Store, No. 301 Grand-st. Surely they cannot do business with such a crowd continually! Oh, no, was the response uttered by another. It was only commenced on Monday last, but they expect it to continue for the next four weeks, at least; the reason, is you see, on Friday and Saturday last they closed the Store, and marked down their whole stock at less than first cost, as you will readily perceive, if you will price that beautiful Shawl yonder. But is the statement so intense during the whole day, queried the first? Yes, I believe it is, except early in the morning. Well! as there is no chance now, let us go, and we will come in the morning, for I will have that Heavy Rich Plaid Silk at 4 shillings per yard. Exit both, with difficulty.

(Advertisement.)

LIFE-SIZE PHOTOGRAPHS.—The attention of the public is called to our new style of Daguerreotypes on paper taken in all sizes; the life-size far surpassing, in depth of tone and brilliancy, the most finished painting on canvas. The smaller sizes resembling the most delicate Miniature on Ivory. As to likeness and durability, they are unsurpassed. Perfect likenesses, of any size, can be made by the process from Daguerreotypes. Taken only by J. GURNEY & C. D. FREDERICKS, No. 46 Rue basse du Rempart, Paris, and No. 349 Broadway, New-York.

(Advertisement.)

POPULAR LECTURES.—Pursuant to public request from the ladies of this City, and also from Drs. TRALL and MCNEALY, Prof. WARREN and others, Dr. BANNING will lecture in Stuyvesant Institute at 3½ P. M., on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, the 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th inst., to ladies exclusively, on Physical Education, management of the voice, and health generally; and to ladies and gentlemen at 7½ o'clock on the same evening, and at the same place, on the same subject. Arrangements have been made with Doctor B. for free admission to all.

(Advertisement.)

☞ Mothers who have introduced PHALON'S PAPHIAN LOTION into the nursery, testify that it relieves all irritation of the cuticle, to which infants are subject, and no lady who has ever used it will deny its beneficial effects upon a sun-darkened or chapped skin. PHALON, No. 517 Broadway, (St. Nicholas Hotel,) and No. 197 Broadway, corner of Dey-street. For sale by druggists and fancy dealers everywhere.

[Advertisement.]

☞ INHABITANTS OF THOSE DISTRICTS where fever and ague prevails, may insure themselves from the attacks of that miserable disease, by the use DRAKE'S Anti-Periodic PILLS. They are tasteless and harmless, and contain no salt of mercury, arsenic, or quinine. Sold at No. 241 Broadway, and by all respectable druggists.

(Advertisement.)

☞ Who is elected Governor is doubtful; but it is certain that LILLIE'S Safes were elected at the great fire test at the late Philadelphia Fair. More of the same sort for sale at the Depot of World's Safe Company, No. 110 Pearl-street, Hanover-square, New-York. J. C. MORRIS, Agent.

(Advertisement.)

GAS! GAS!—GAS FIXTURES of new designs and unsurpassed workmanship, will be found at the great manufacturing depôt of ARCHER, WARNER & Co., 276 Broadway; also, a few portable gas apparatus, designed for country residences, churches or factories.

(Advertisement.)

GAS FIXTURES!! GAS FIXTURES!!!—Of splendid design and finish, and twenty per cent. cheaper than any other house, wholesale and retail, at the manufactory of JAMES G. MOYNET, Nos. 119 and 121 Prince-street, third block West of Broadway.

(Advertisement.)

CASTLE GARDEN.—Brilliant feats will be given this afternoon and evening by the great combined troupes of R. SANDS and MONS. CHIARINI, at Castle Garden.

(Advertisement.)

☞ ROOT'S Daguerreotypes, Photographs, Crayons and Stereoscopes taken in any weather at No. 363 Broadway, corner of Franklin-street.

Markets by Telegraph.

BUFFALO, Thursday, Nov. 16—11½ P. M.

FLOUR—The receipts of Flour are good this morning. The stock in store is very light. The market opens with a moderate inquiry. Sales of 300 barrels extra Ohio at $9.

WHEAT—In Wheat there is an active milling demand, and the transactions are at previous rates. The stock of Upper Lake continues fair. Sales of 4,000 bushels of Racine at $1.86, at $1.50, and 15,000 bushels of Chicago at the same figure.

CORN—Corn is in good request, but the supply is not equal to the demand. Sales 12,000 bushels, at 70c.

OATS—The stock of Oats is good, but there is nothing doing.

WHISKY—Whisky is quiet. Sales 100 bbls., to arrive, at 24½c.

CANAL FREIGHTS—Are dull and unchanged.

RECEIPTS this morning: Flour, 5,250 bbls.; Wheat, 20,040 bushels; Corn, 33,550 bushels; Oats, 22,705 bushels.

BUFFALO, Thursday, Nov. 16.

FLOUR—There is no change to note in the market for Flour. The demand is fair. Sales 1,000 bbls. at $8.50@$9 for Upper Lake, and $9.50 for good Michigan, Ohio and Indiana. Included in the sales were 300 bbls. Pearl Mills, extra Ohio, at $9 12½.

WHEAT—The supply of Wheat is good, especially of the inferior grades, and rather pressing on the market. Sales 16,000 bushels, at $1 95 for white Michigan, and $1 50 for mixed Wisconsin.

CORN—Corn is in better supply, and in good demand. The market is steady. Sales 6,000 bushels, on the spot and to arrive seen, at 70c.

OATS—Oats are more plenty, and hardly so firm. Sales 30,000 bushels, at 41c.@42c.

WHISKY—Whisky is firmer. Sales 100 bbls., to arrive, at 24c.

CANAL FREIGHTS are a shade easier, and dull. On Flour to New-York, 70c.; on Wheat 65c., and on Corn 16c.

RECEIPTS—Flour, 6,767 bbls.; Wheat, 42,540 bushels; Corn, 77,766 bushels; Oats, 48,536 bushels.

NEW-ORLEANS, Wednesday, Nov. 15.

The steamer Atlantic's news had no effect upon our Cotton market. The sales to-day have been 3,500 bales. Middling is quoted at 8½c. The increased receipts at all Southern ports, as compared with this time last year, are 41,000 bales. MOLASSES is selling at 17c. ⅌ gallon; MESS PORK, $17; BACON is considerably higher—10½c. asked. COTTON FREIGHTS to Havre, ¾d.

CHARLESTON, Thursday, Nov. 15.

The sales of COTTON for the week have been 6,000 bales. Prices close easier, but not quotably lower; Upland Middlings are held at 8½@8½c. The receipts of the week amount to 15,150 bales. The stock exclusive of shipboard is 35,000 bales.

MARRIED.

In this City, on Wednesday, Nov. 15, by Rev. Dr. Hutton, MATTHEW J. PARKER, Esq., of Boston, to Mrs. MARGRET FREEMAN, of this City.

In this City, on Wednesday, Nov. 15, by Rev. Dr. M. W. Bellows, ROBERT D. HART, of this City, to HARRIET A. PRESCOTT, daughter of John Mathewson Overton, of Brooklyn.

In this City, on Wednesday, Nov. 15, by Rev. Samuel Cooke, JAMES H. GAGER, of San Francisco, to ELIZA M. BURTIS, daughter of D. Ethelbert, Esq., of this City.

In Brooklyn, on Tuesday, Nov. 14, by Rev. Dr. Cox, by Rev. G. W. Noyes, of New-Haven, Conn., CHARLES F. FORBES, of New-York, (formerly of Toronto, C. W.,) to EMELINE E. PEALL, of New-Haven, Ct.

At Brooklyn, on Thursday, Nov. 16, by Rev. R. S. Storrs, D. D., Mr. CHAS. O. WILDMAN, of Boston, Conn., to Miss SARAH ANN, only daughter of Mr. Jas. Bell, of Brooklyn, formerly of Hartford.

At Brooklyn, on Thursday, Nov. 16, by Rev. R. S. Storrs, D. D., Mr. DARWIN W. GRANT, of New-York, and Miss ELIZABETH C. BRIGGS, of the former place.

At Jersey City, on Thursday, Nov. 16, by Rev. Mr. Hatfield, Mr. JAMES W. WILLIAMS, of New-York, to Miss MARY E. BACHELOR, of the former place.

At Jersey City, on Thursday, Nov. 16, by Rev. Mr. Hatfield, Mr. [illegible] of New-York, to Miss [illegible], of the former place.

At Jersey City, on Thursday, Nov. 16, by Rev. Mr. Hatfield, Mr. [illegible] of New-York, to Miss [illegible], of the former place.

At Newark, on Wednesday, Nov. 15, by Rev. Mr. Hatfield, Mr. [illegible] of New-York, to Miss [illegible], of the former place.

DIED.

In this City, on Wednesday, Nov. 15, [illegible]

[illegible] Nov. 15, [illegible]

[illegible] Nov. 15, [illegible]

[illegible]